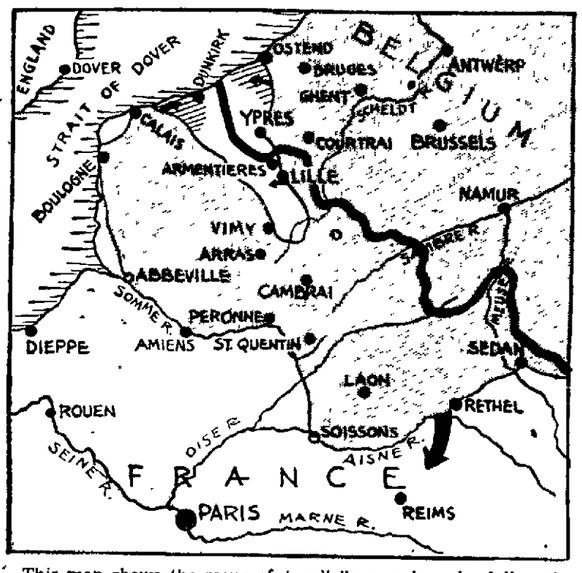
Where Allies Meet Defeat



This map shows the scene of the collapse of Allied resistance on the western front, as claimed by German high command communiques issued at Berlin. The Germans claim the capture of Ostend and Lille and the storming of Ypres and Mt. Kemmel. Dunkirk is under fire of heavy artillery. Armentieres — made famous by the popular World war "Mademoiselle" song—has also fallen, the Germans claim. Between 300,000 and 500,000 French and British troops, and some Belgians who refused to obey King Leopold's command to surrender, are trapped and striving to escape by sea from Dunkerque (Dunkirk). Germany late this morning claimed to have sunk three warships and 16 transports being used to remove Allied troops.

Defense Board Holds First Session Today

National Preparedness Program Heads Past $4,000,000,000 Mark as Commission Studies Job.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Six men and a woman devoted the holiday set aside to honor the dead of past wars to the cause of national defense today—mapping a vast campaign to give speed and cohesion to the country's peacetime muster of military sources.

They represented business, industry, labor, agriculture, transportation and even the consumer—all enlisted to serve on President Roosevelt's new national defense commission.

The came to the capital for their first meeting (at noon, EST) to survey what already has been done, to measure their task, and to make plans for its accomplishment.

Even before they had the chance to receive from Mr. Roosevelt the personal instructions that would send them to their jobs in earnest, the huge preparedness program was heading past the $4,000,000,000 mark.

With congress already asked to vote more than $3,000,000,000 for regular and emergency defense needs during the coming fiscal year, the chief executive was at work on another extraordinary request—probably for $750,000,000—to furnish the army with the newest weapons of modern lightning war.

General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, was reported to have informed a house appropriations subcommittee yesterday that military lessons learned from German blitzkrieg tactics made an additional $750,000,000 necessary.

Marshall was understood to have said that the funds were required for more mechanized equipment, anti-tank guns of greater power, a new type of light machine gun and other weapons.

It was reported that the supplementary request also would contain provisions for a 3,000-warplane order to help the currently expanding aircraft industry toward the projected 50,000-planes-a-year goal.

The reason appropriations for these items were omitted from Mr. Roosevelt's $1,182,000,000 emergency defense requests, officials explained, was that the army had insufficient time to prepare its estimates. An additional three-quarters of a billion would boost defense spending to $4,047,011,352.

The job of the new defense commission will be to see that this enormous sum is converted quickly into the ships, guns, tanks, airplanes and other sinews of war that the army and navy have requisitioned.

NAZIS TRAPPED

Germans Fight Rear-Guard Action Near Narvik.

STOCKHOLM —(AP)— German troops today were reported fighting a rear-guard action after withdrawal from the Norwegian ore port of Narvik but in danger of being trapped by Norwegian forces deployed along the Swedish frontier to bar the Nazis' escape into Sweden.

KING'S COUSIN KILLED

LONDON—(AP)—Lord Frederick Cambridge, a first cousin of King George VI, has been killed in action, it was learned in London today.

PANAMA POLICE END REBELLION

Pre-Election Riots Halted In Marica Area; Deny Bridge Destroyed.

PANAMA, Panama —(AP)— Police announced last night that their forces had occupied the rebellious town of Laguna and suppressed pre-election unrest among Campesino residents of the "Marica" area.

At the same time President Augusto S. Boyd and his cabinet ministers in a nationwide manifesto urged maintenance of peace and order and reiterated a promise of free and honest presidential elections to be held June 2.

United States Canal Zone authorities and Panama officials have denied that a bridge over the Tetas river connecting the Zone with the Rio Hato army base was destroyed in disturbances in which several supporters of former President Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, who is an opposition candidate, fled to the Canal Zone.

JUTLAND HERO DIES ON SHIP

Commander Of British Warship Killed In Action.

LONDON —(AP)— The death of Captain David James Robert Simson, "killed while in command of his ship," was announced today. He was the husband of Arlette Thal, daughter of the late G. J. Thal and Mrs. Thal of New York and Paris.

Simson served in the battleship King George V, which led the line of the British battle fleet in the World war battle of Jutland in 1916.

The announcement of his death did not name his ship but said "he died in the way he always wished to."

DEFENSE PLAN HITS SNAG ON TAX ARGUMENT

August Session of Congress Suggested to Work Out General Program.

ECONOMY DEMANDED

Senate Finance Committee Balks on Simple Bill Submitted to House.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — A wave of support for new defense taxes swept through congress today, but arguments over the directly-related subjects of the federal debt limit and economy raised the possibility of indefinite delay.

Suggestions came from both Democrats and Republicans that congress should return in August after the political conventions to work out general tax legislation.

House Republicans expressed concern that Mr. Roosevelt might use part of the proposed $3,000,000,000 increase in the $45,000,000,000 debt limit to meet general government expenses, rather than devote it entirely to national defense purposes.

Chairman Doughton (D-N.C.) of the house ways and means committee said, however, that there was a definite plan to earmark the money for defense.

Congressional tax experts are drafting a bill to increase income, excise and amusement taxes to provide new revenue of $656,000,000 annually for five years to cancel the debt increase.

"The administration is using this program to get out of the hole it has got itself into," said Rep. Treadway (R-Mass.), ranking minority member of the ways and means committee.

"If we're going into all these things, we ought to include, say, a 10 per cent cut in all government expenditures."

Considerable sentiment was developing for separation of the debt limit and tax questions, rather than lumping them together in a single bill. Republican ways and means committeemen said that they would insist on that procedure, and Senator Van Nuys (D-Ind.) said that many in the senate agreed.

The tax program struck its first snag in the senate yesterday when Chairman Harrison (D-Miss.) failed to get the finance committee to accept in principle the fairly simple bill which the house is expected to pass. Members apparently sought more detailed information.

Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, the house Republican leader, was among those who demanded general tax revision.

"I think it would be better to pass a general tax program," he said. "We could recess from June

'Battleship' Sunk Forcing New York Harbor Entrance

NEW YORK —(AP)— An imaginary hostile battleship, attempting to force an entrance into New York harbor, lay on the ocean floor 15 miles off Rockaway point toady, so far as the coast artillery was concerned.

Two 16-inch guns at Fort Tilden, firing 14 one-ton shells costing $3,000 each, blasted away at the imaginary invader yesterday. It was the first time the guns had been fired since 1935.

Air observers reported a direct hit by the ninth shell and several incidental hits which officers considered sufficient to sink a battleship.

The actual target was an 18-foot wood square, towed by an army tug at 950-foot distance. Earlier the coast guard had cleared the sea lane for the firing test.

Guns Roar Near Last Havens of Heroes

Cemeteries and Classic Chapels Echo To Sound of Cannon Fire and Bombs In France, Belgium.

By JOHN GROVER

WASHINGTON—Europe's war is within gun-sound of American soil—those United States cemeteries in France and Flanders where rest 30,902 American war dead.

Already bombs have dropped near these silent American outposts. One, the Meuse-Argonne cemetery, has been reported struck by bombs.

Solemn Memorial day services in the American cemeteries this year will be punctuated by the long unfamiliar, but too well-remembered, thunder of great guns in the distance.

Six of the eight American cemeteries in France are on battlefields where Yankee troops rolled back the Hindenburg line in the assaults of June to October, 1918. Those six lie square athwart the line of battle followed in western Europe since Caesar's time.

Ungrudged millions have been spent—$5,000,000 in all—by the U. S. government to assure perpetual beauty to these quiet cities of the dead. White marble crosses—six pointed stars of David for the Jewish dead—bloom in ordered rows on the broad acres.

Guarding each American cemetery is a lofty-vaulted chapel. The chapels, all in the classic architectural tradition, were built for

Nation Honors Unknown and Known Soldiers In Tributes

By EDDIE GILMORE

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The nation's honors on this Memorial day go to the Unknown Soldier whose marble tomb rises on the Arlington hills across the Potomac—a wreath from President Roosevelt . . . a program of soft music, word tributes . . . an unending line of hushed, respectful visitors.

But in government offices, case after case of records tells of a host of known and unknown soldiers . . . a study of America and its wars . . . a picture of death and dollars.

Over at the veterans administration, for instance, a statistician can tell you in less time than it would take to dodge a bomb that 119 American veterans will die before midnight.

Ninety-one, on the daily average, will be survivors of the World war.

Twenty-three will be Spanish-American veterans.

Four from the Civil war.

One from the Indian wars.

How much has the United States paid to veterans and dependents of all its wars? The big machines click, click, click as they add. Here is the total:

Crestline Resident Killed When Struck by Automobile

CRESTLINE — John William Henry, 81-year-old proprietor of a Crestline second-hand store, was killed instantly last night at 9:15 when struck by an automobile.

The accident occurred in South Thoman street in front of the Big Four freight office.

Paul L. Klehm, 22, Galion, driver of the car, was not held. Charles Deihlman, night patrolman, said he believed Henry walked in front of Klehm's car.

Henry is survived by two sons, Clayton W., of Mansfield and Levi J. of Ontario; and a daughter, Mrs. Roland L. Williams of Galion; one sister, Mrs. Lydia Frye of Clearwater, Mich., and two brothers, H. C. Henry of Crestline and Andrew J. of Shelby.

The body was taken to the R. E. Beck funeral home.

HOLIDAY STILLS CITY'S BUSINESS

Scouts Decorate Graves of Soldier Dead; Parade To Be Started at 1:30.

Mansfield's business and industrial life were at a standstill today as the city paused to pay tribute to the memory of soldier and civilian dead.

Flags were flying under cloudy skies this morning and the streets were dotted with men in uniforms. Boy Scouts were hurrying about their task of decorating soldier graves in Mansfield cemeteries, which represent six American wars in the past 165 years.

The American Legion home and the Memorial building were open today to guests. At noon hour veterans of the World war will give their annual luncheon for Spanish war veterans and other service men.

The first ceremony today was to be held at 11 a. m. in Central park at the Doughboy monument. The American Legion auxiliary will lay a wreath at the foot of the monument as a symbol of decorating the graves of all unknown soldiers.

At noon the flag in the park will be raised to full mast and at 1 p. m. the units taking part in the parade will form on Park avenue west, and at 1:30 will begin the march to Mansfield cemetery and Memorial stadium where main ceremonies will be held.

Preparations have been made, however, to hold the services in First Lutheran church, since show-

FOUR AMERICAN DRIVERS HELD

Reported Prisoners of German Troops In France.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Four American volunteer ambulance drivers are reported to be prisoners of German forces in France.

James Wood Johnson, president of the American ambulance corps in New York, said he had been advised by the corps' commander in Paris that a German radio announcement said the four were captured.

They were tentatively listed as Albert Raymond, Chicago; Louis Wehrle, Berne, Ind., Murray Shipley, Cincinnati, and Jan Glowacki, Jersey City, N. J. They were working in the Ardenne area.

Meanwhile the U. S. liner Washington, sailing today, had six more AVAC volunteers as passengers.

France Due for Next Nazi Blow

France Expected to Feel Next Major Blow of Nazis; Allies Struggle On to Break Out of Trap.

BULLETIN

BERLIN — (AP) — The German high command announced today that its flying units had sunk three British warships and 16 transports in a night attack on Allied naval forces removing trapped troops from Flanders. A fourth warship was said to have been sunk by anti-aircraft fire.

BULLETIN

PARIS—(AP)—Allied naval units were reported today to have begun successfully the removal of troops in the Dunkerque region, while at the same time moving in large supplies for forces still in the battle zone.

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN — While the Nazi press hinted that France rather than Great Britain would be the objective of the next major drive of Adolf Hitler's war machine, the German army today concentrated its full mechanized might upon quick defeat of half a million Allied troops in the battle of Flanders.

(Paris sources put the total trapped troops at 300,000 men.)

Reports from the front this morning only strengthened the German conviction that the beleaguered Allied armies are doomed to surrender or annihilation in short order.

They told of the capitulation of groups of French soldiers encircled by the Germans south of Lille, and informed sources added there was a noticeable weakening of French resistance at many points within the Nazi steel trap.

In German eyes, it appeared only a miracle could save the Allied forces from capture or utter destruction.

The Germans looked to the continued pounding of their dive-bombers, tanks and heavy artillery to reduce the French and British to capitulation on the best possible terms in a very short time.

The German admitted Allied resistance was fierce, that the trapped men were selling their lives dearly and that German losses were heavy in the smashing drive to close out this chapter of the war in the west.

But they could see only one outcome—and that a Nazi victory.

One German observer summed up the seeming hopelessness of the Allied situation in four points:

1. Separation of the British and French forces, with the British penned in a rough triangle running from Lille to the sea and the French encircled south of that city, has made military co-operation between the two impossible.

2. Encirclement of the two forces has weakened each so much that they haven't the strength to cut through the German lines.

3. Terrific Nazi air and artillery bombardment of Dunkerque, only major port held by the trapped Allied troops, has cut off the last possible avenue of escape by sea.

4. German control of the coast—with Nazi bombers ranging over the sea and Nazi speedboats roaming the channel and North sea waters—has blocked any shipment of reinforcements either in men or supplies by the sea route.

While the press accused Britain and France of urging Switzerland and Portugal to accept Allied guarantees of security in "another effort to bring more neutrals into the war," military authorities reported the German forces were mopping up in Lille, most important industrial city in the northwestern corner of France, and applying tremendous pressure on the isolated French to the south and the British to the north.

It was admitted the British still had the sea at their back. But Nazis said it seemed to offer little chance for escape, since the harbor of Dunkerque has been subjected to blasting German artillery fire and is reported to have been in flames for three days. No other port still in Allied hands in this sector, it was said, has facilities for rapid embarkation of large numbers of troops.

Moreover, German bombers were reported to be darting

". . . that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

—From Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

As We Observe Memorial Day

NOT since the Memorial days of 1917 and 1918, when the United States was engaged in the World war, has this holiday brought such a widespread feeling of sadness as marked its approach this year.

It has long been a practice of people in all parts of the civilized world to set aside some special time to decorate the graves of loved ones and Memorial day, as we know it, had its beginning just after the end of the Civil war when May 30 was chosen in the northern states as the day on which to strew flowers on the graves of soldiers who died in defense of their country.

In southern states other dates are designated as Memorial day, varying with the season of most abundant flowers, from late April into early June.

Except for the fact that May 30 has gone through more than seventy years as the traditional Memorial day, there is no particular reason for this date, which swings through the week in a way that probably prevents as universal observance as if it were anchored on some definite day, as, for instance, the final Sunday in May, which has been frequently suggested and is apparently gaining in favor.

Since 1868, when Memorial day was first observed in a general way, the United States has been engaged in two other wars and this holiday has been extended in its scope to include decorating the graves of all soldiers and to make it a day of memories—a time for serious thoughts of the past, the present and the future of this nation in which the toll of war have been heavy and the accomplishments of peace have been great.

And as our thoughts turn to our own heroic dead, and to those who have suffered through many years from effects of participation in the World war, we cannot avoid thinking also of the disaster that is now being visited upon much of Europe, and of the suffering which has come to millions of people because of the war now being fought.

While honoring our own hero dead, this is a fitting time for earnest prayers that mankind may soon find the way to remove the scourge of war from the world forever, by means of honest, far-reaching, self-sacrificing co-operation and better understanding among all people.

Character Building in a Democracy

TALKING to the Boys' Clubs of America the other evening, Herbert Hoover said some things worth the attention of grown-ups. Just as Fascists build their boys as part of a military state, he observed, free nations like ours want to build their boys to support and represent a democratic state.

"We citizens of the largest remaining democracy have a high duty and a high purpose in making easy the path of the democratic ideal," he says. Government will probably concern itself more and more with the affairs of the nation's youth, but "it will be a sign of degeneration if we private citizens shall surrender character-building to the state. That is not the place where personality and character can be built."

The place of such building is the home, the school and the church. They can do it far better than political dictators. And they know that people do not exist for the purpose of becoming slaves of an all-powerful state, but the state itself exists to serve them and preserve their individuality.

Should Credit Be Extended?

A DELICATE question is being raised again—that of foreign war credits. A Gallup poll indicates that American sentiment has changed greatly on this matter. A little more than half of our people now appear to favor giving Britain and France credit on airplanes bought here, if they can't pay cash. Such feeling may be expected to grow stronger, as the resources of the Allies are exhausted.

No financial crisis has yet occurred. The crises so far have been military, resulting from a lack of preparation against the incredibly powerful methods and materials used by the Nazi armies. But the Allies are obviously going to need great quantities of military supplies, very quickly, if they are to save themselves from conquest.

The feeling has been growing that Britain and France are our own "first line of defense." Americans tend to think less of monetary considerations and more of the bonds uniting these three free countries, and of the perils this country might have to face if the present defenders of western civilization were crushed.

For the present, at least, the obvious thing to do is what is already being done—increase production and export of military and naval equipment needed by the Allies.

Inventory of Boy's Pocket

THE CONTENTS of the pockets of the "typical American boy" were placed in the cornerstone of a new boys' club building in Boston the other day. The objects thus cached for the enlightenment of posterity were "two tops, a rubber ball, a baseball, a religious medal, a police whistle, a deck of cards, a small cross, and no money." It is related that the typical boy himself insisted that there be no money in the pile.

The pocket contents seem good as far as they go, but many readers will say, "What! No string?" And no candy, or stones, or broken pencils?

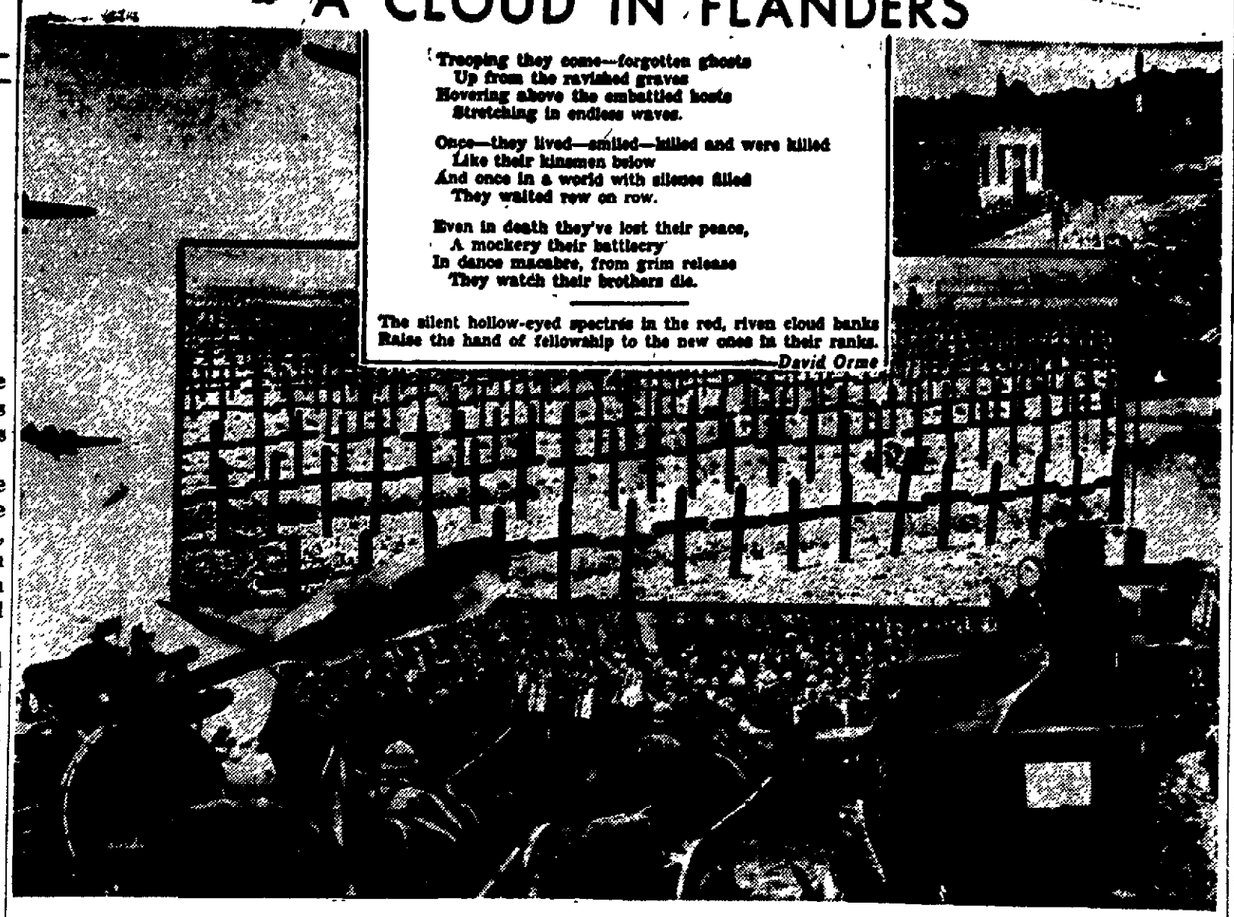
Either contemporary boys are different or the future openers of the corner stone have been gypped.

Gaining Over Wheat Rust

A CONTEST between wheat growers and the fungus known as black stem rust goes on, with success sometimes going to the men and sometimes to the disease. It is said that wheat rust is exceedingly variable, changing with new conditions. Thus a strain of wheat that is immune to rust this year may, a few years hence, succumb to a new strain of the fungus.

Right now the victory seems to lie with the breeders. At any rate, they announce six new wheat strains, five from seed imported from Africa, one a native Canadian product. All six have shown a high resistance to the 20 types of rust to which they were exposed.

A CLOUD IN FLANDERS



Trooping they come—forgotten ghosts
Up from the ravished graves
Hovering above the embattled hosts
Stretching in endless waves.

Once—they lived—smiled—killed and were killed
Like their kinsmen below
And once in a world with silence filled

Even in death they've lost their peace,
A mockery their battlecry
In dance macabre, from grim release
They watch their brothers die.

The silent hollow-eyed spectres in the red, riven cloud banks
Raise the hand of fellowship to the new ones in their ranks.

What Happens If Germany Wins?

—By CARTER FIELD

WHAT if Germany wins? This question wouldn't have been asked seriously when the current World war started. It was taken for granted that the Reich couldn't imaginably win. Now the problem is urgently before the Washington government's high command. It not only is a headache to army, navy and aviation experts, but to economists also.

Our economists are the worst worried.

Our army men don't really anticipate that their arm will be involved any time in the reasonably near future. Aviators, as spoken by Charles Lindbergh, still don't think that we're in much danger from the heavens. Lindy, to be sure, is considerably criticized for his remarks, and possibly he does overestimate himself as an international statesman. However, he's a middling good authority on the subject of aviation.

Our navy crowd has better reasons for apprehension. It's got two oceans to reckon with, and strength enough to police only one of them.

Perhaps it should be conceded that our diplomats, too, are justified in lying awake nights, fretting. The state department folk are KEPT awake nights, anyway. Secretary Cordell Hull seldom gets eight hours of unpunctured slumber without four or five long-distance phone calls from as many different overseas capitals.

But the Economists?

The economists, though, are the chaps who occupy the anxious seats.

They're not merely awakened nights. They STAY up, figuring.

Suppose the gold standard is internationally repudiated as a currency base. We had a little discussion of that chance a few days ago. Realized, it would upset our currency base fundamentally.

Suppose Germany wins the war, and corks up our foreign trade markets except for absolute indispensibles.

How'll we get rubber, tin, mercury, manganese, antimony, et cetera, if the Germans control all these sources? We ought to have thought of it sooner. We can get, for instance, tin from Bolivia and rubber from Brazil—if only we'd developed them. But we didn't.

Now they're just like our navy. They're potential, but they're not, today, available.

A Self-Supporting Country.

The United States produces nearly everything it has to have. Why can't it go it alone, independently of the rest of the world?

I once put this query to the late Senator Marvel M. Logan of Kentucky, a rip-snorting good Democratic free trader. "It would work," he answered. "We can figure out our own destiny. We can't do it if we're internationally complicated. It isn't free trade doctrine, but it's logical."

Later, on the strength of this chat, I put the same quiz up to Secretary Hull.

"Couldn't we Americans," I asked, "considering how self-sufficient we are, run along pretty comfortably on 'our own'?"

"My reply would be," said the secretary, "that we could do it most UNcomfortably."

Note the emphasis.

Here's where the militarists and the economists disagree, but they diverge.

And there's economic argument in favor of a "lower standard of American living." Just how they get off on that I don't know. I wouldn't think it would be popular. Nevertheless, some of the economists are boosting for it. They say it's inevitable.

How'd the Americas' living standard be affected, either way?

Listen, World!

Which Gave the Better Performance?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

LIKE a lively shindy? Regular free-for-all, with no holds barred? Then here's a question which is guaranteed to turn the most peaceful dove-cote into a Donegal Fair:

"WHICH GAVE THE BETTER PERFORMANCE—THE OLD-FASHIONED MOTHER OR THE MODERN ONE?"

A reporter decided to take a vote. So he hit the street with his mike on the Saturday preceding Mother's day and began asking questions, playing no favorites, just taking folks as they came. What's your bet as to results? Think the majority favored the Nifty Modern Numbers? You're be surprised! Listen:

Came first a brisk Business Man. What did he think of the 1940 Maternal Model versus the 1904 patterns? He thought poorly and didn't care a darn who knew it!

"There's no comparison!" he snapped. "The young mothers of today are so busy seeking excitement—playing cards, hanging around cocktail bars and night spots—that they never establish a real motherly relationship with their children."

"That's true," echoed another gentleman, "but it isn't quite fair to blame the women for it. The whole world has changed; they've naturally been affected by it. There are so many distractions. Girls are brought up to think pleasure is a prime essential and a supreme, personal right. You can't blame them for trying to escape dullness their mothers endured."

* * *

BUT the third male bystander wouldn't accept the alibi. "A woman should do her duty, regardless of passing trends," he opined. "Modern women are too far away from the essentials of homemaking. They're too pampered . . . . they've been taught to regard sacrifice and drudgery as stupid and degrading. The consequence is, they're afraid to work. And the worst thing is, they're bringing up their girls by the same dangerous standards . . . loosing another crop of shallow, selfish, lazy mothers on the world."

"Tisn't so!" said the two Red Cross workers. "The Modern Mother has all that her Old-Fashioned Mother had—and more. She has a far better understanding of her children and their problems, and a much better relationship with her world."

Which brought an enthusiastic endorsement from a pretty young mother, trailed by two cute chicks. "THE MODERN MOTHER FACES AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT PROBLEM THAN HER MOTHER DID," chirped she. "SHE CAN NO LONGER BE JUST A GOOD COOK AND NURSE. SHE MUST BE A GUIDE AND COMPANION. SHE MUST KEEP IN STEP WITH A CONSTANTLY CHANGING WORLD OR, LATER ON, SHE'LL FAIL HER CHILDREN WHEN THEY NEED HER MOST."

But the man in the tweed overcoat still differed. "They're lazy and loose," these Modern Mothers," he grunted. "Always chasing around, getting beauty treatments, trying to keep young, neglecting their homes. You can't be a real mother and do that. And their children, spoiled or neglected, show it. Impudent young smarties! But, fortunately, the world soon kicks it out of them! Pity it can't do the same to the Mothers!"

Some Symposium! What's my vote? Well, I've been a Mother for 37 years, and I'll agree that Mothers have immeasurably more opportunities for enlightened service than they ever did in my youth—and that there's an infinitely happier relationship between youngsters and their parents. And yet—

I sometimes wonder if a Mother's shoulder ever seems as soft today to a troubled young head as my weary little Mother's did . . . or a heart as deeply understanding! Sacrifice does have its points, even if it isn't recognized in the current vogue! What do YOU think?

Memorial Day

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Cover them over with beautiful flowers,
Deck them with garlands, those brothers of ours,
Lying so silent by night and by day.
Sleeping the years of their manhood away."

* * *

Strangely enough, though Memorial day is a legal holiday in the Northern States and Territories, it was in the South that, previous to its formal celebration, it was observed by many women, who laid flowers upon the graves of both the Union and the Confederate departed.

No special date was set aside in commemoration, the simple ceremony being an individual affair during April, May and June.

General John A. Logan, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., established the first set date for the observance of Memorial day.

This was done by issuing, shortly after the Civil war, the following order to the Grand Army posts:

"The 30th day of May, 1868, is designated for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion, and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village and hamlet churchyard in the land.

"In this observance, no form of ceremony is prescribed, but posts and comrades will in their own way arrange such fitting services and testimonials of respect as circumstances may permit."

Today, Decoration day, as it is popularly known, memorializes not only the Civil war dead, but also those who gave their lives for the United States in any of its wars.

In decorating the graves of the dead, we are following a rite of great antiquity.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—If there was any doubt about Wall Street being the lifeline of New York's frivolous enterprises, the recent stock market tumble quickly removed it. This scare gave Broadway and indeed all the five boroughs a bad headache. It left vacant seats in theaters that had sold out continuously since opening. It put a chill on racing enthusiasts, sent swank stores into advertising "Wednesday sales," which is rare here, and left nightclubs and hotel dining rooms lamentably empty.

This scare came with the news the Germans had overrun the Lowlands. That nights stocks were off 1 to 16 points. That night for the first time in nine months the Musix Box, where "The Man Who Came to Dinner" is playing, failed to sell out. That night three big musicals, which play to a strong Wall Street trade, had half-filled houses. Twenty-One, The Stork club and night clubs of a similar character were lonely outposts where only a few of the faithful remained to keep the tables from being altogether deserted.

The severity of the scare was most eloquently reflected in the turnout that greeted the Belmont Park opening, always an event in the east. Belmont is New York's finest track. But only a meager crowd of 13,000 turned out for the opening. Four weeks ago twice that number were on hand for the Jamaica opening, and Jamaica is a down-at-the-heels track in comparison.

The answer was this: all the Wall Street boys, who supply most of the trade, were at their offices burning late oil. They were frightened. Some of them had lost a lot of money. They didn't know what might happen next.

* * *

IF OUR hand seems swollen today it is because we have been doing a lot of hand-shaking. First, we went over to see Larry Clinton, who hasn't been in New York in several months but who has returned to Broadway now and will be in the Summer Terrace for the next few weeks. Larry is in from a long tour which carried him to the Gulf, and while in New Orleans, he acquired a new vocalist whose name is Helen Southern. That isn't her real name. Her real name is Helen Inglert. . . . "But she's a southern girl, and in any case Southern is a better show name than Inglert," explains Larry.

While we were talking to Larry our old friend Fay Thomas came up. Fay used to be manager of the Carter in Cleveland but has been brought to the New Yorker in New York. With him was Olie Olsen of Olsen and Johnson, and when we asked where Johnson was, Olie said, "Why, that great big outdoors hero has bought himself a farm in Connecticut, and he drives up there every night after the show. He gets up at dawn and goes trout fishing. Every day he brings trout down to New York. Something tells me I'm going to get awful tired of trout before the summer is over."

* * *

THAT same night we went over to see Ray Kenney and welcome him back to New York. The big Irish-Hawaiian, after a three months' holiday in the islands, was back in Manhattan with a cargo of brand new hula talent. Brought three new hula dancers along with him, in addition to the other two he already had. After seeing the new show we asked Ray whether these girls had been in New York before.

"New York," he cried. "When I found them they hadn't even been to Honolulu."

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—One of the things which is holding up the manufacture of more military equipment for the army and navy is the fact that so many U. S. factories are sending machine tools to Japan.

The war department has just finished a confidential survey of the machine tool industry and finds that most American plants are working on orders for the Japanese. Machine tools are all-important in the munitions business, because they are used to equip new factories expanding to meet new national defense orders.

As far as the war department is able to ascertain, Japan has plenty of machine tools, and is storing many of the new shipments now received from the United States—for emergencies. Japan also continues to be a big importer of U. S. scrap iron, and also is storing it for the future.

These are two reasons why President Roosevelt has asked special powers of congress to embargo shipments of materials which are considered vital to the defense of the United States. He expects, as soon as authorized by congress, to slap an embargo on scrap iron and machine tools to Japan.

* * *

GOP Blasts.

THE barrage of Republican blasts against a coalition cabinet which has strafed the country recently was no spontaneous meeting of minds. Neither was it aimed entirely at the president. It was aimed much more against the Republican party itself.

Inner GOP master minds admit that their political chances have been almost as hard hit as the shattered Allied lines in Europe. Prior to this catastrophic development GOP election prospects appeared very bright indeed.

It looked as if the campaign would be fought chiefly on Republican ground; that is, on domestic issues. Also, it was doubtful whether Roosevelt would run. But the Hitler blitzkrieg changed this situation overnight.

The Allied disaster, its ominous implications to the United States, and national defense pushed everything else into the background. The GOP no longer could take an ambiguous "peace" stand, but has been torn wide open on the war issue. Powerful elements within the party were publicly clamoring for American aid to the desperate Allies.

It is a secret of Republican congressional leaders, but they had to intervene forcibly to prevent some of their followers from introducing bills repealing the Johnson act, which bars credits to the debt-defaulting Allies.

Meanwhile every Nazi victory drew Democratic lines closer together, cut the ground from under the inner party foes of a third term, and daily made it more certain that the president would run.

* * *

Counter-Attack.

THIS was bad enough, and Roosevelt's move to bring one or more Republicans into the cabinet made it worse.

To National Chairman John Hamilton, Pennsylvania boss Joe Pew, Hoover and other inner moguls, the consummation of this plan meant the finish of their election hopes. With several Republicans in the cabinet and Roosevelt heading the Democratic ticket, the GOP wouldn't have a chance.

Something had to be done fast to block this. After a series of hurriedly called secret conferences and much long-distance telephoning, a two-pronged counter-offensive was launched, one aimed at the president, and the other at Colonel Frank Knox plus other Republicans who might be offered cabinet posts.

The barrage on Roosevelt was opened by Colonel Lindbergh's speech pooh-poohing any invasion of danger. In inner GOP circles this is credited to Hoover via his close friend William Castle, former under secretary of state. Castle has advised Lindbergh on most of his speeches, accompanied him to the radio station when he made this one

This was followed up with the carefully spaced statements by Landon, Hoover, Representative Wadsworth, House Floor Leader Martin and others demanding that the president renounce a third term as the price for GOP participation in the cabinet.

The counter-attack within the party was largely undercover. Heavy pressure was brought on Knox not to accept a cabinet offer, and it was strongly intimated that any Republican who did accept a Roosevelt cabinet appointment would be vigorously opposed for confirmation.

* * *

THE PRESIDENT didn't mention it when he announced the new expanded civil pilot training program, but oldsters as well as youngsters now can learn to fly.

Of course the older people will be very few in number combared to the thousands of men between 18 and 25. But there will be three or four schools especially assigned to training them as part of an experiment by the Civil Aeronautics authority.

For several years the CAA has been fostering the development of so-called safety planes; that is, ships that are spin-proof. Spins are the cause of most crashes. Several such craft are now on the market and to further their use, the CAA will offer free flying instruction to men and women above the regulation age limit.

Anyone who can pass a physical examination is eligible to take the course. This consists of 45 hours flying instruction in one of the safety planes, and if the student cares to continue, he can have another 30 hours course in an ordinary plane. The only cost is $6 for the physical examination and $3 for the insurance.

The youngster training program will make available to non-college youths the same flying instruction that 10,000 college students received this school year. It will run from June 15 to September 1 and will be given in 550 private training centers which the CAA had surveyed in anticipation of exactly this kind of emergency. Each student will receive 70 hours ground training and between 35 and 50 hours flight instruction. There will be no cost, and where deemed desirable the government will pay students board and room.

Note—The government pays the private flying centers $310 to $350 for each student they train. All schools and instruction are closely supervised by CAA inspectors and all students are insured. The CAA has chalked up a remarkable safety record of only one fatality out of 10,000 students; or one fatality in 300,000 flying hours.

Rural Commencement

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I ATTENDED a rural commencement at a high school in a village of about 200. The speaker of the evening, a business man, invited me to go along. It was a pleasant moonlit evening. We traveled along the country side where tulips flamed in neighbors' lawns and lilacs bloomed. We crossed and re-crossed a winding stream and scented the cool dampness of the lowland. We arrived at the village nearly an hour before the program would begin.

The schoolhouse was a modern rambling structure, of brick, high on a slope. We parked the car on a level ledge and looked upon a panorama of rolling country, clothed in fertile fields and burgeoning forests. We went inside the building. The janitor was the first man we met—a kindly soul past middle age; then the superintendent, who was young and very responsible appearing, welcomed us into his office. We met the president of the board, a gray farmer, who would present the diplomas; a teacher and two high school boys.

The place of meeting was a gymnasium-auditorium. I chose a seat high in the bleachers where I could look down upon the stage. The place was decoraied with wild flowers and flowers from rural gardens. The orchestra of grade and high school pupils, played a march. The class of 20 marched in, two by two, clad in dark gray gowns and caps, with red carnations pinned upon them. Among the crowd I tried to pick out the parents of graduates, and to put myself in their places. What pride, what satisfacton they experienced in their children's success!

The program was typical. An address of welcome, two solos, a valedictory, then the speaker of the evening. His was a most appropriate address for a rural occasion. Even his humorous stories were about the farm and domestic animals. He addressed the youth of today as the guardians of tomorrow.

Afterward, I stopped a graduate in the hall, and asked, "What do you think of your high school?"

"I believe," said he, shyly, but with emphasis, "that high school is the best place for young people to be. I'll work this summer and then spend another year on the farm. I hope by that time I'll have enough money earned for at least two years of college. Look over here!" He led me to an arch in the hall above which was written "Beneath this arch passes daily the best in the world—the American high school student, the hope of tomorrow."

ASHLAND WILL PROVIDES FOR DAUGHTER'S MUSICAL TRAINING

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—In an unusual will filed yesterday in probate court here, the late Josephine Forsyth Myers, patron of music and widow of Philip A. Myers, wealthy Ashland (O.) pump manufacturer, provided for the musical education of her 10-year-old daughter, Phyllis Andrew.

Income from trust funds, totaling more than $500,000 will be devoted to this teaching if Queena Mario, noted opera singer, "who sang at my daughter's christening," thinks the girl's voice is worth training when she reaches the age of 16.

If her daughter dies without heirs, Mrs. Myers directs the establishment of "Forsyth Myers Hearth," in New York as a home for needy girls and women professional artists, musicians, singers and sculptors. Administrators of the trusts are Attorneys Samuel Horwitz, Joe B. Kiefer and Paul Harmel.

It happens to the best of us. We all like to step out in something a little finer, a little smarter, a bit more able, than the other fellow has.

So when you can do that—and get a better buy in the bargain—why not step right up to the head of the class?

Just look around you. Can you name a sleeker, trimmer, neater, smarter-looking car than this 1940 Buick?

Do you see anything on the road that can keep pace with its husky, valve-in-head straight-eight engine—Dynaflash patterned for thrift, and electrically balanced after assembly to brand-new smoothness?

Ever see anything slicker than the way its soft, rear coil springs float the body serenely along, even though the wheels be dancing?

You won't find a bigger car anywhere at its price, measured bumper to bumper, nor one with a frame as heavy and stout.

You won't find cooling systems sealed under pressure, Fore-N-Aft Flash-Way Direction Signals with automatic cut-off, nor as many cost-free "extras" included in the price.

In short, here's your one best 1940 yardstick—but that's only half of it.

Here's big value—within your reach! Current prices† begin at $895 ★for the business coupe, delivered at Flint, Mich.; transportation based on rail rates, state and local taxes (if any), optional equipment and accessories—extra as usual.

Net of all that is delivered-to-you prices so close to lowest-price-field figures that you'll get most of the difference back in the higher trade-in value your Buick will have later on.

So go ahead—satisfy that itch to be "tops"! First step is to see the nearest Buick dealer.

†Prices subject to change without notice.

It's our biggest year... so you'll find the best deal in town at your Buick dealer's

Late May Weddings Draw Attention of Socialites

—Betty Goddard Studio —Photos by Perez

Brides and brides-to-be supply plenty of exciting news these days, as weddings and pre and post-nuptial affairs crowd the spring and early summer calendar. Pictured at the left above is the former Miss Marjorie Mae Miller who became Mrs. Howard W. Reynolds at the First Christian church on April 25. Another bride of last Saturday is the former Miss Katherine Nancy Fisher, shown in her wedding gown at the right. She became the bride of Peter Adam Zimmerman at 9:30 a. m. at St. Peter's Catholic church. Upon their return to Mansfield from a short Eastern trip they will be at home with Mr. and Mrs. John Fisher at 397 Buffalo street. Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds are living at 353 South Main street. Shown in the insert is Miss Sanchen Cutter whose engagement to H. E. Shoemaker was announced last week by her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Weston Cutter, 86 Parkwood boulevard. No date has been set for the wedding.

CATHERINE HORNUNG MARRIES EARLY TODAY

Becomes Bride of Joseph Kleshinski Before Altar of St. Peter's Catholic Church In Formal Service.

WEARING a gown of pure white faille taffeta Miss Catherine Joan Hornung approached the altar of St. Peter's Catholic church this morning at 9:30 o'clock on the arm of her father, Michael Hornung. Msgr. R. C. Goebel read the nuptial mass which united Miss Hornung, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hornung, 245 Sycamore street, and Joseph Alois Kleshinski, son of Mrs. Walter Kowalski, 568 North Mulberry street.

The bride's dress was made on long simple lines featuring the leg o' mutton sleeves and sweetheart neckline. The only trimming on the gown was four bands of self piping on the wide girdle from which the full circular skirt fell, ending in a formal train. The four yard veil which the bride wore virgin style was attached to a pearlized orange blossom headpiece.

Carries Prayer Book.

She carried a white prayer book with a single white orchid and spray of lilies of the valley, and wore a small heart locket set with mother of pearl, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Elizabeth Hornung, Cleveland, was maid of honor, and Miss Magdalen Sebastian was bridesmaid. Both attendants were attired in gowns made of silk marquisette over taffeta and lace. The dresses were made in a full bodice style caught in tight girdles which fell away in drindl skirts. The sleeves were made bishop style ending in a snug cuff at the wrist. The underskirts of the frocks were finished in net and lace ruffles decorated with miniature bouquets.

With these dresses both girls wore juliet caps made of two shades of purple violets with purple velvet streamers. Each carried nosegay bouquets tied with purple ribbon. Miss Hornung was attired in staff rose, and Miss Sebastian wore como blue.

Sylvester Kleshinski, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. The bride's brother, Matthias Hornung, and her cousin, Jacob Joppa, jr., Chicago, Ill., served as ushers as did the bridegroom's brother, Leo Kleshinski.

Use Gladioli.

The altar before which the nuptial ceremony was performed was banked with palms, ferns and two beauty baskets of pink gladioli. Raymond Baum, organist, played the nuptial music.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Hornung was attired in a navy blue sheer redingote style costume with white accessories, while Mrs. Kowalski wore a powder blue redingote dress with white accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of briarcliffe roses.

At 6 o'clock this evening a dinner is being served to the wedding party and guests at the Liederkrantz club on North Main street. Late this evening the couple will leave for a week's motor trip through the south. Upon their return they will be at home at 46½ Bell street. For traveling the bride wore a navy blue Jeroma crepe two piece costume made with a full length fitted coat over a matching dress. Her accessories were white.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kleshinski are graduates of St. Peter's Catholic school. The bride has been employed as a stenographer at the Ohio Brass company, while Mr. Kleshinski is employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

Red Cross Quota Set; Women Turn From Bridge to Sewing

WOMEN who formerly occupied their leisure moments with bridge, parties, luncheons, golf and other forms of entertainment have recently turned their attention to Red Cross activities as a result of the heavy demands for apparel being made by refugees and victims of the current European conflict.

Most any Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday between the hours of 9:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. one can see a busy group of women sewing and knitting at the Red Cross work room located at 12½ West Fourth street.

A quota of 50 women's dresses, 100 girls' dresses, 50 layettes, 50 hospital bed shirts, 50 convalescent robes, 25 operating gowns, 50 men's sweaters, 50 women's sweaters, and 100 children's sweaters has been established for the Richland county project, and Mansfield women will work the entire summer completing this assignment.

Mrs. Leopold Adams is chairman of the project, and Mrs. M. L. Smith is vice chairman and also in charge of the sewing. Mrs. Donald B. Chapman is in charge of the knitting, Mrs. Edwin Eichin, chairman of surgical dressings, Mrs. John Pierce, purchasing and materials; Mrs. Lawrence Houk, work room and equipment; Mrs. Charles Arbaugh and Mrs. Ray Painter, packing and shipping.

The following women will be in charge of the work room on the various days it is open: Mrs. Arbaugh, Mrs. Walter Becker, Mrs. Fred Elder, Mrs. W. J. Locke, Mrs. Lloyd Paste, Mrs. Murray D. Shaffer, Mrs. T. J. Chamberlain, Mrs. Paul Hauserman and Mrs. H. E. Goldman.

Mrs. Adams has invited all volunteer workers interested in sewing and knitting to report to the work rooms at any time on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday.

Shelby Residents Figure In Weddings Thursday, Saturday

SHELBY—Of interest to social circles in Shelby this week are the weddings of Miss Eileen Mary Slone of Delaware to Frank Hanrahan, jr., and Miss Reathea B. Stickney to Warren Raymon Lake which will take place out-of-town.

Miss Stickney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Stickney of Shelby, will exchange wedding vows with Mr. Lake in a single ring ceremony at the Lutheran church parsonage in Lucas at 9 a. m. Memorial day.

Rev. M. P. Paetznick, pastor of that church and a former assistant pastor of Shelby Lutheran church, will perform the service before members of the immediate families and friends.

Attending the couple will be Mr. and Mrs. Paul Billman of Willard.

Following the wedding, a reception and dinner will be held at the bride-elect's parents' home in this city. Later in the day the couple will leave for a short motor trip and upon return make their home in Shelby.

Miss Stickney graduated from Shelby high school in 1935. Mr. Lake, a graduate of the Tiro schools, is employed at the Shelby Equity.

Miss Slone, a former Mansfield resident, will be united in marriage to Mr. Hanrahan in a ceremony at 10 a. m. Saturday at St. Peter's Catholic church in Mansfield. Following this ceremony, a reception and dinner will be given at the Susie Janis in Mansfield.

Miss Slone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Slone of Delaware, has been employed at the Chamber of Commerce in that city. She graduated from St. Peter's high school in Mansfield. Mr. Hanrahan, a graduate of the Shelby schools, is employed at the Frank C. Schiffer and company, Shelby.

Plan Foursomes For Today's Play At Country Club

With the weather behaving in anything but a suitable golfing manner it is a little risky to write about plans for the Memorial day two-ball foursome planned at the Westbrook Country club today. However, late evening reports from Mrs. E. S. Weller stated that play will begin at the club at 1:30 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Weller and Dr. and Mrs. O. H. Schettler are chairmen for the day. Prizes will be awarded in low gross, low net and blind bogey.

Yesterday members of the Women's association met for a luncheon-bridge party at the club house. Mrs. A. C. Rhoads was chairman for the day, and prizes were awarded to Mrs. V. H. Lodde and Mrs. Schettler. The next bridge party will be a buffet on June 11 following the regular Tuesday morning golf matches.

Members of the Women's association will meet next Wednesday for their regular golf at 9 a. m. with luncheon to follow. Pairings will be announced in Saturday's issue of the News-Journal.

* * *

ENTERTAINS GROUP.

There were ten members of the Iota Sigma chapter of the W. C. T. U. present at the meeting held with Mrs. Claude M. Hunter, 312 Glessner avenue, yesterday. Mrs. Lillian Beaumont gave the devotions, and Rev. C. F. Sheriff was the speaker of the afternoon choosing as his subjevt. "Palestine." Plans were made to hold a covered-dish dinner meeting at North Lake park some time in June.

* * *

PLAN FETE.

The Brinkerhoff school will have its annual lawn fete June 6 at the school grounds. Serving will begin at 6 p. m. with sandwiches cake, ice cream, candy and beverages available. There will be games, a fish pond and movies throughout the evening.

Strains of Lohengrin to Sound Through City as June Arrives

IN SPITE of the fact that we were certain at the end of last summer that absolutely every elegible young man and woman in town had marched up the middle aisle to the strains of Lohengrin, the approaching nuptial season points to an all time high in weddings in the Mansfield area. There are three marriages planned for tomorrow, and because of the long week-end provided by the holiday there will probably be other quiet services read here and away for Mansfielders.

At 9:30 a. m. Saturday Lena Mae Teeter will meet Clayton W. Frank at the altar of the First Christian church where they will be married by Rev. B. F. Hagelbarger. Attending the pair will be Miss Jean Seybold and Russell Frank.

Wed June 1.

Miss June Eileen McLaughlin has also chosen June 1 for her marriage to Frank Keifer, but the wedding plans have not yet been disclosed. The same morning Miss Eileen Slone, Delaware, will become the bride of Francis Hamraham, jr., of Shelby before the altar of the St. Peter's Catholic church.

Another June marriage will be that of Miss Metta Pearl Roach and Melvin Welty on the 8th. Details of this event have not yet been disclosed. Miss Frances Conn, who announced her wedding date only this week, will be the bride of Austin Thompson Cochran at the Women's Club at 4:30 p. m. June 14, with Rev. B. F. Hagelbarger officiating.

Mid-June will certainly be a favorite time for marriages. Two Mansfield girls have already selected June 15 as their wedding date. Miss Mary Schiska revealed at a recent party that she and James Desy, Mackinaw City, Mich., will wed at St. Peter's at 9:30 a. m. At a dinner party the other night Mr. and Mrs. Emil Kraus, 244 Rae avenue, disclosed to friends that their daughter, Marie, had selected June 15 for her marriage to Austin LeVere Sites.

Will Officiate.

Dr. G. E. Swoyer will officiate at the wedding which will take place at noon at the altar of St. John's Evangelical and Reformed church.

The following day Miss Virginia Anderson and Howard Heston will exchange vows at the bride-elect's home on Davis road. Miss Ruth Carson has also chosen June 16 for her marriage. She will be the bride of George Columbus in a home ceremony performed at the bride-elect's brother-in-law and sister's home on Glenwood boulevard.

Just the other night the four sisters of Miss Ruth High gave an announcement party for her at which time it was revealed that she will become the bride of C. K. Dye in a quiet ceremony to be read by Dr. Swoyer June 22 at 2:30 p. m. at the First Lutheran church.

The final bride of the month, so far, will be Miss Elmira Caugherty who will marry Jack Russell. Details of the coming marriage have not yet been announced.

HOSTESS TO CLUB.

Mrs. C. H. Porter, 39 Atcheson avenue, was hostess yesterday to members of Les Huit Femmes club when cards were in play. Mrs. Clyde Pittman and Mrs. Richard Burgett were the winners. Mrs. Burgett gave her prize to Mrs. Margaret Hakes, a new member. Luncheon was served at a long table decorated with white flowers and red, white and blue appointments. Mrs. Anthony Majoy, 26 Grant street, will entertain June 13.

Stop Forming Wrinkles

By MME. QUI VIVE

From the day when the wind-blown bob took flight the forehead has been bared. This back swept style has been going strong for nearly ten years. Which goes to prove that if a fashion is flattering, it survives. It isn't just a passing beauty fad.

Foreheads are naked and unashamed and, except for the few girls who flaunt fringes, haven't a single silky thread to cover them. This is a bit tough on the woman who has acquired frowns or cross lines. She hates to have them out in the public eye. She can't pull her hair down over her nose without being dated way back when. She has the strongest possible incentive to get busy with her beautifying tools and to iron away the creases. We won't say that she can erase them if they are old settlers, have been there for a long time But she can tone the tissues and take out an insurance against the formation of new gullies.

The lines affect not only the surface; in time burrow down into the underlying tissues. That is why one should catch them young, be a highly energized wrinkle swatter. Some are expression lines caused by facial gestures, and it is senseless to have them. Others are caused by worry, malnutrition, sleeplessness or tension.

The woman who registers surprise by lifting her eyebrows is bound to get a corrugated forehead. Little railroad tracks run from one side to the other. Let her ceases this practice and the flesh will be smooth again.

Frowns are sometimes self-inflicted. Irritability, intolerance, anger pull the eyes together and the little dents are established. Impaired vision is another cause, just as squinting etches in turkey tracks. One might as well use foresight, avoid these afflictions. The most valuable beauty aid a woman can cultivate is a serene nature. Keep a nice placid cowlike calm on your countenance and there's a good chance that it will be satin smooth until the end of your days.

To treat cross lines on the forehead, apply a heavy cream to a clean skin surface. Place the fingers of both hands facing each other and iron up and down, moving the fingers from side to side as you continue the up and down motion. Placing the first fingers in the center of the forehead, work outward with little circles. Keep the muscles of the forehead relaxed.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

The rehearsal swept on with Mary dominating it completely by her brilliant, really breath taking rendition of her role. But my pleasure in it, my gratification at seeing how wonderfully she had carried out my teaching, were marred by my fear of what the Veritzens, father and son, would do when the rehearsal should finally come to an end.

Had Noel seen as I had, that look of dawning romantic interest in Mary on the face of Stephen Redfield, her leading man? If he had I knew that his quick, jealous anger would be aroused. That was natural, but would he be able to suppress his emotions, and give no hint of them to Mary? If he were not able to conceal his feeling from her, I knew that her moment of triumph would be spoiled in only lesser degree than it would be if Philiup Veritzen should refuse to confirm her in the role, even after the marvelous exhibition she was now concluding.

About Philip Veritzen's reaction I could do nothing. Whatever verdict he meant to give concerning Mary at the end of the rehearsal—or afterward—was his alone—there would be no slightest opportunity to change his mind.

Lillian, Dicky and Harry, all had said that when the great producer should hear this rendition of Mary's, his artistic conscience, the supreme arbiter of his actions, would not permit him to take the role from her. Logic and common sense bade me agree with them, but I was keyed up to so temperamental a pitch that I had room in my heart only for tremors and fears.

The rehearsal ended with a final speech of Mary's, and with one accord at its close, the players, after an instant's tribute of silence, broke into hand-clapping. But Philip Veritzen stilled them with uplifted hand.

"I am exceedingly pleased with you all," he said, patiently ignoring the tribute to Mary. "I shall make no criticisms today, nor, I think, will Mrs Graham."

He looked at me, and I shook my head, as I moved to the push button connecting with the kitchen where, I knew Katie was waiting for my signal to bring in "tea, mit cakes and tings."

"Then you are excused," he said. "Will one of you men please summon the drivers, and — Mrs. Graham, may we rehearse here tomorrow at the same time?"

"I am sure you can," I told him, rigidly repressing my resentment for his apparent lack of enthusiasm over Mary's performance. "If anything should happen to void the appointment, I will telephone you in ample time. But please delay summoning the drivers"—I extended a protesting hand to one of the actors going to the door. "Katie is serving tea here almost immediately"

"Oh-h! tea!" Nancy Carew exclaimed delightedly. "Surely, Phil, you must wait for that!"

She did not wait for his answer, but with the rest of the cast crowded around Mary in exuberant congratulation. I was glad to see Olina in the front rank of the rush, glad to see her kiss Mary warmly, and whisper some special word of acclaim into her ear. I was glad also that no member of the cast hung back, while thankful that Noel was not near enough to see the expression on Stephen Redfield's face as he bent above Mary, murmuring his exuberant approval of her work.

Katie's appearance with the tea broke up the circle around Mary, but as we discussed the delicious little cakes and sandwiches with which Katie always accompanies a request for tea, I caught Nancy Carew's glance going from Redfield's face to Mary's, and then to mine, and I felt intuitively that before she left she wished to give me some message of import to Mary.

It was when the tea was over, and the women were putting on the wraps that she was able to draw me aside from the rest and murmur her message into my ear.

"Look out for your winsome niece"! she whispered. "Steve Redfield's bad medicine. I'll explain further when I can."

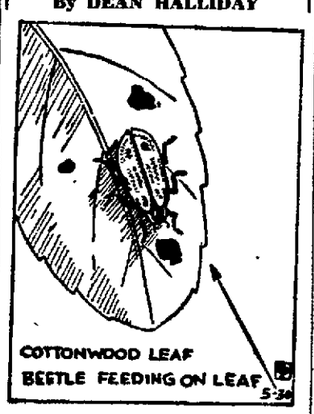
Garden Graph

By DEAN HALLIDAY



KEEP AN EYE OPEN FOR COTTONWOOD LEAF BEETLE

Another enemy which should be on the blacklist of every gardener is the Cottonwood leaf beetle. These beetles spend the winter under tree bark and in trash on the ground among trees. Early in the Spring, these pests become active and develop a voracious appetite. They feed on the young, tender shoots of willows and poplars. In addition to feeding on the foliage, the beetles lay clusters of eggs on the undersides of the leaves. The larvae, or grubs, hatched from these eggs also feed on the undersides of the foliage causing the leaves to become skeletonized. There are many broods of these beetles each year, sometimes as many as five.

The adult beetle in its feeding forays eats out irregular holes in the leaves, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The beetle is about ½ inch long and has yellowish colored wings marked with elongated black spots.

To control these pests spray suspected trees early with arsenate of lead, using 1½ pounds to 50 gallons of water. It is important that the spray thoroughly wet the undersides of the leaves.

Dressy Dessert For Slim Meal

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

AUGMENT a skimpy meal or enhance a fine repast with a dressy dessert and all will be well. Icebox Gingerbread is such a sweet. For 16 portions, use one-half cup butter, one cup granulated sugar, two eggs, unbeaten; one-half cup molasses, two cups sifted flour, teaspoon ginger, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon allspice, one-half cup sour milk or buttermilk, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Cream butter and sugar. Add eggs, one at a time, beating after each addition. Add molasses and beat well. Combine dry ingredients and add alternately with milk a small amount at a time, and beat. To store, cover bowl tightly, first with a damp towel, then with waxed paper; tie securely with a cord, and store in refrigerator until ready to bake. Bake in greased pan in 350 degrees Fahrenheit oven for about 45 minutes.

Here's a recipe for a quick apple strudel which is not beyond the capacity of any cook, and will not take up much of her time to prepare. Make it with two cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespons sugar, three tablespoons shortening, two-thirds to three-fourths cup milk, three cups chopped apple, one-half cup sugar, teaspoon cinnamon, confectioners' sugar and chopped nut meats. Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Cut in shortening and add milk to make a soft dough. Turn onto a floured board and knead gently. Roll out one-fourth inch thick. Brush with butter, cover with chopped apple.

Sprinkle sugar and cinnamon over apple. Roll jelly roll fashion and form into semi-circle on a greased baking sheet. Bake in moderately hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) from 20 to 25 minutes. While warm, frost with confectioners' frosting made by beating confectioners sugar with a little hot water until smooth, and flavor with vanilla extract. Sprinkle chopped nuts over frosting.

Dessert Omelet Celestine is something very special for a big dinner party, since the amounts given here are for nine portions. Use 12 eggs, two tablespoons each thick whipped cream and confectioners sugar, teaspon butter, 12 stale, crumbled macaroons and six tablespoons apple or other acid jelly. Place the crushed macaroons and the acid jelly in the whipped cream. Beat the eggs without separating. Add one tablespoon of warm water and the powdered sugar. Drop the butter into a very hot pan and tilt until the bottom is evenly greased. Pour the eggs into it and shake and stir with a spatula. When the omelet is ready to fold, pour the macaroon mixture into the center, fold over and turn out onto a hot dish. Dredge with a little powdered sugar and brown quickly by holding under a flame. Serve with whipped cream.

"The Authority on Authorities"

DIVIDE THE WORK RIGHT

In an effort to protect your side against an impending squeeze, as the declarer runs off what you know is a very long suit, it is up to you and your partner to pick your discards efficiently so that the threatened suits are properly guarded. If a squeeze against your other three suits is being built, one of you must protect the longer one of the three while the other protects the two shorter suits. If you try to guard the long suit and one short one, you may find both of you are helpless.

Pass	5 ♣	Pass	Pass

West led the spake K and, when East gave him the 2 on it, switched to the diamond K. South thereupon ran his long clubs and, while doing so, discarded so that he built the pattern of a pretty squeeze play. By the time he played his next to last club, he had pared the dummy down to the spake Q, its highest two hearts and the diamond 6, while in his own hand remained his three hearts and one club.

All this time East and West were discarding, too. West made a bad mistake. He decided to hold in each suit the same number of cards as the dummy up to the bitter end. But when he was down to the spade K, three hearts and the diamond Q, and had to play on the next to last trump, he made his fatal misplay of the diamond Q. When the last trump came, he had to hold the spade K, of course, so threw a heart, leaving him only two. The dummy then tossed off the Spade Q, and it was East's turn. The latter now had three hearts and the diamond J. The latter was needed to keep the diamond 6 from setting up, so East discarded a heart. Then the declarer took three heart tricks to make his contract.

If West, on the next to last discard, had decided to guard spades and diamonds, he could have thus left the hearts to East, and there would have been no squeeze.

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, May 31.

An interesting and eventful day, with contacts which may prove of prime significance, is read from the predominant lunar aspects. New associations of an unusual nature may call for some rather drastic activities, with either social, fraternal or group affiliation assuming prominence. Elders, superiors and those of high standing figure in plans of ambitious character, probably bearing on the social, humane or religious position and advancement, but act not impulsively.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which their fortunes and personal prestige may progress or be affected by new contacts and changed interests. This may be in relation to group advancement, either humane, social or possibly spiritual. There may be basic radical or revolutionary programs involved, without any sinister objectives. But refrain from impetuosity and haste.

A child born should have fine intellect with advanced ideals and ambitions and probably will be devoted to the progress and enlightenment of its fellows. It may have peculiar force and versatility in this direction.

Thirty-three Speedsters Battle for 500-Mile Crown

Shaw is Leader In Event

Rex Mays Expected to Give Two-Time Winner Real Test.

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

INDIANAPOLIS—America's largest thrill-seeking crowd, undaunted by a forecast of possible showers, swarmed to the Indianapolis motor speedway today to watch 33 intrepid drivers vie for the cash and glory which go to the winner of the 28th international 500-mile race.

Thirty-three low-swung, shark-nosed speedsters, tuned to piano wire pitch, were ready for the 11 a. m. (EST) starting bomb to send them roaring around the two-and-a-half-mile brick and asphalt track before a crowd expected to range from 125,000 to 140,000.

* * *

Wilbur Shaw, dapper Indianapolis pilot who won the 1937 and 1939 races, was an outstanding favorite but Rex Mays of Glendale, Calif., was rated his most dangerous rival. Shaw's mount is the same eight-cylinder Italian car he drove to victory at 115.035 miles an hour a year ago.

* * *

The drivers battle for $100,000 in prizes, with the triumphant pilot getting $25,000 to $35,000, depending upon the number of laps he leads during the race. The winner of each of the 200 laps collects $100.

Shaw was in the middle of the first row in the 11-row starting lineup. Beside him in the pole position was Mays and on the other side was Mauri Rose of Columbus. They won the coveted front row positions by averaging better than 127 miles an hour on the first day of qualifications.

Mays was behind the wheel of the eight-cylinder racer in which Louis Meyer of Huntington Park, Calif., only three-time winner of the classic, led most of last year's race before it was wrecked. Mays has competed in the "500" for six years but never has finished. Rose, in one of the most sensational finishes ever seen here, came in 30 seconds behind the victorious "Wild Bill" Cummings in 1934.

The field consists of 31 American drivers; Raul Riganti of Buenos Aires, the South American champion, and Rene LeBegue, French soldier on leave from military duty. LeBegue's crew worked feverishly during the night on his damaged car, which threw a piston through the crank case in practice Tuesday.

The general prediction in Gasoline Alley was that today's winning speed would be 119 miles an hour—unless showers make it necessary to hold the drivers in check until the track dries.

The late Floyd Roberts set the record of 117.200 an hour in his 1938 triumph. The first speedway race, in 1911 was captured by Ray Harroun with an average of 74.64.

Since the first race 38 lives have been lost. Even before qualifying trials began this year George Bailey of Detroit was burned to death when his speedster crashed into a retaining wall.

Thousands of spectators jostled and pushed to be among the first through the speedway at the 6 a. m. opening. Many waited outside the 488-acre racing plant all night—some even longer—and automobiles were lined up for miles as virtually all traffic converged on the big oval.

* * *

Hotels, tourist camps, and eating and drinking places were jammed with race-goers. Residents of Speedway City and adjoining sections of Indianapolis converted their yards into parking lots and refreshment stands.

* * *

The setting for the race resembles a mammoth family picnic. The mile-long stretch of grandstands seats 60,000 persons and the infield accommodates 15,000 automobiles. A majority of the throng, with lunch baskets and beverages, finds vantage points in the infield.

LLOYD PINE WINS CLOSE DECISION OVER WALKER

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Lloyd Pine, 135, Akron, won a close decision over Tiger Walker, veteran Cincinnati Negro, in an eight round fight here last night. Walker weighed 133.

Floored in the first round for the count of nine, Jackie Carpenter, 149, Columbus, came back to score a knockout in the fourth round over Tiger Jackson, Akron Negro. Buddy Kelly, 130, Cincinnati, scored a technical knockout over Dusty Rhodes, 132, Akron.

PECKINPAUGH, SISLER IN BOX SCORES AGAIN

SAGINAW, Mich. — (AP) — Two sons of famous baseball players are playing in the Michigan state league, a new six-club Class C circuit. Walter Peckinpaugh, son of Roger Peckinpaugh, famous Cleveland Indian infielder, is shortstop of the Saginaw club. Dick Sisler, son of George Sisler, great first baseman of the St. Louis Browns, is with Lansing.

Indians, White Sox Call On Southpaw Pitching

CLEVELAND — (AP) — The Indians and White Sox became southpaw conscious today as four portsiders drew the pitching nominations in a Memorial day doubleheader.

Chicago picked Thornton Lee and Edgar Smith, while Manager Oscar Vitt called on Al Milnar and Al Smith.

The Indians had batting practice yesterday morning and a few hours later blasted three Detroit pitchers for 14 hits to give Bob Feller his seventh victory of the season. The score was 7 to 4, the Tribe posting six of its runs in the first two innings off Rookie Tom Seats.

Feller wasn't in his best form, allowing a home run, five doubles and two singles. However, he walked only three and was tough for Bengal batters in the pinches.

Cleveland scored three times in the first on a walk to Lou Boudreau, Jeff Heath's double, an infield out. Hal Trosky's two-base blow and Rollie Hemsley's single. Three more runners crossed the plate the next inning on Feller's single, a walk, Rudy York's error and Beau Bell's slashing double. The Redskins wound up scoring in the fifth with a run on Pitcher John Grosica's error and Ray Mack's single.

Bruce Campbell, former Cleveland outfielder, led the Detroit attack with a home run. Mack and Trosky had three hits each for the Tribe.

The Indians go east after today's games, opening in Philadelphia Saturday. The Redskins were only mildly successful in their home stay, winning seven and losing six up to today's twin bill.

Mansfield Merchants Will Try To Climb Into Win Column

Still suffering from the sting of two defeats in the last two weeks the Mansfield Merchant Girls' softball team will attempt to lose its jinx today when they mix it up with the Burgettstown, Pa., girls' team in a doubleheader at North Lake park.

The first game will be played at 2:30 p. m. and the second is scheduled for 3:45 p. m. Clark is expected to take over the mound duties for the Merchants.

Considered in the same class as the Lawrence, Pa., team which handed the Merchant Girls a twin setback two weeks ago, the Burgettstown team should provide plenty of competition for the Mansfielders.

Mansfield Loses Veteran Pitcher

By CHARLES MARTIN

LOYD "DEACON" JOYCE will not handle another pitching assignment for the Mansfield Braves during the 1940 season.

* * *

The "Deacon," one of the mainstays of the 1939 staff and counted on this season by Manager Dewey Stover to steady his younger moundsmen, has developed a sore arm and club officials announced today that he had been released.

* * *

Joyce's absence from the lineup is a hard blow, for the Braves are making a serious bid to overtake the league leading Findlay Oilers in the Ohio State circuit race.

With Joyce out, the Braves are in Lima today to clash with the Pandas in a twin bill. Stan Kudelvitz is scheduled to face Lima in the first game at 2:30 p. m., while Alex Radoumis is expected to get the call in the nightcap at 8:30.

Mansfield is humming along on a four-game winning streak and a double victory over the Pandas today will bring the club within a half game of the runner-up Lima combine.

Joyce broke even in two starts this season. He was the second Mansfield hurler to face Findlay Tuesday night and Stover had to send George Laurila in to replace him. Joyce complained of a lame arm earlier in the season, but didn't think it was serious.

"I don't believe I'll ever pitch another game of ball," Joyce stated. "My arm has been bothering me for several months, but I thought if I could take my regular turn on the hill it would be all right."

"But when I tried to toss 'em over Tuesday night it felt as though I was throwing my arm at the plate on every pitch."

Joyce accompanied the team to Lima today and will return to his home in Candem, Ind., tonight. He teaches school in Candem and is a basketball coach during the winter season.

Mansfield plays at Findlay Friday, then returns to the Fairground to face the Oilers at 3 p. m. Saturday and Lima at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Lima was beaten by a 3 to 2 count by Fremont last night and the Braves picked up a half game on the Pandas. Mansfield trails the Oilers by three and a half games.

* * *

Connie Zerman, who left the Brave wigwam May 16 without permission today had been removed from the suspended list and placed on the ineligible list by club officials.

* * *

Zerman, the club's regular left fielder, had a chance of joining the Warren, O., club in the Penn State league, but turned down the offer because he secured a federal job in Bellevue.

Walters Shows Better Form Than Last Year

Cincinnati Mound Ace Marks Up Eighth Straight By Topping Pirates, 4 to 0.

By JUDSON BAILEY, Associated Press Sports Writer.

SPORTS "experts" eventually get used to having their bad guesses thrown back in their faces, but the fellows who predicted Bucky Walters wouldn't do so well this year must have had an uncomfortable conscience about every fourth day lately.

The lean and languid star of the Cincinnati Reds' mound corps just marked up his eighth victory without defeat, 4-0, over the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday, and is so far out in front of his pace of last year that there is no comparison.

Enroute to his total of 27 victories and 11 losses and the honor of being the National league's most valuable player, the sinkerball specialist had a record of six won and four lost on Memorial day 1939.

This year he has taken his regular turn against all comers, pitching eight complete games and being batted off the hill only once, a no-decision affair as far as Walters was concerned.

His conquest of the Pirates yesterday was his second shutout and second four-hitter (also had a three-hitter) of the spring. Besides stifling the Pittsburgh attack, he contributed two hits to the Reds' own total.

This triumph raised the Reds again into a virtual tie with Brooklyn for the National league lead. The Dodgers, whose small percentage margin stems from the fact they have placed fewer games, were idle yesterday along with the New York Giants.

The day was a good one for pitchers, ten of them going the route in seven games, and three making successful starting debuts.

Atley Donald, who won 13 in a row before being beaten last year, made his first start of 1940 and held the Washington Senators to four hits in giving the New York Yankees their fifth straight victory, 2-1. Charley Keller and Bill Dickey hit homers in the first two innings to give him a margin.

Bill Butland, a six foot six inch rookie, made his appearance for the Boston Red Sox and won an 8-3 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics although giving up 12 hits. The Red Sox got only nine, but they included a double by Joe Cronin with the bases loaded and a home run by Jim Tabor.

Bespectacled Bill Dietrich made his first start of the season for the Chicago White Sox and salvaged fifth place with a 4-3 triumph over the St. Louis Browns. Elden Auker weakened in the eighth when the Sox bunched three runs.

Bob Feller achieved his seventh success with an eight-hit 7-4 job against the Detroit Tigers. The tribe clustered six runs in the first two frames.

In the National league the St. Louis Cardinals stepped up to fifth place with an 8-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Lon Warneke supported his own tenhit pitching with a three-run homer and Catcher Mickey Owen batted in four runs with two doubles.

One of the day's best pitching performances came from an unexpected quarter. Dick Errickson of the Boston Bees held the Philadelphia Phillies to five hits and won 3-1. The Bees crowded four of their six hits into a three-run seventh inning.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By Associated Press)

Bucky Walters, Reds—Shut out Pirates on four hits for eighth consecutive victory of season.

Atley Donald, Yankees—Pitched 2-1 decision over Senators on four hits.

Lon Warneke and Mickey Owen, Cardinals—Besides their efforts as a battery, Warneke hit three run homer and Owen drove in four tallies with two doubles to beat Cubs.

Dick Errickson, Bees—Held Phillies to five hits.

CO-ED TENNIST MAKES COLLEGE VARSITY TEAM

CARLISLE, Pa.—(AP)—Alice Abbott, Philadelphia co-ed, was so good the boys couldn't keep her off the Dickinson college male tennis team. She plays No. 5 position and has lost only one match this year. Miss Abbott prefers to play tennis with men while some of her male opponents object because they are torn between feelings of chivalry and the embarrassment of defeat at the hands of a pretty co-ed.

Third Degree Favorite In Belmont Race

Crowd of 25,000 Expected For Classic Handicap.

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK—(AP)—This apparently being "long shot" season, anything can happen today in the classic Suburban handicap at Belmont Park, which has been loaded with upsets, anyway, in its 56-year history.

* * *

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Third Degree, winner of the Metropolitan mile a week ago, and George D. Widener's Eight Thirty, upset loser in that race, are regarded as the class of the field of an even dozen.

* * *

However, the surprises of this spring's Kentucky derby, Withers and last week's Metropolitan, and the added angle that the Suburban is at a mile and a quarter and has attracted some classy stretch runners, all tie together to make it possible an outsider may come along to pick up the marbles. In addition, if all 12 go to the post, this will be the richest Suburban in history—and the $20,350 to the winner can buy a lot of horseshoes.

The history of the Suburban is well sprinkled with upsets. Horses like Discovery, Questionnaire, Exterminator, Fair Play and, only two years ago, Pompoon, all were beaten in their attempts to hit the jackpot. That's why a latecomer like Myron Selznick's Can't Wait or J. B. Partridge's Sandy Boot might surprise in today's renewal.

A crowd of between 25,000 and 35,000, largest of New York's spring season, is expected at the Long Island racing plant, and a million dollar mutuel "handle" is looked for.

* * *

Eight Thirty, winner of six straight races up to his fourth place finish last Saturday, is top-weighted at 127 pounds. Third Degree will be packing 124 and, with his well-regarded stablemate Hash as an entry-partner, probably will go to the post favored in the betting.

* * *

Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmens, winner with Snark in '38 and Captain Alcock in '22, has a chance for his third Suburban with William Woodward's Isolator, like Sandy Boot, a seven-year old. Others in the field are A. C. Bostwick's Belay, D. Page's Maeda, Maxwell Howard's Disappointing the Chief, T. W. Howell's Olympus, Mrs. Clara Lyon's Alumino and D. P. Ross' Masked General.

Nick's Place Softball Team Meets Safety Club.

Pete Metz, Nick manager, announced today. Monday, the Nick outfit will play the Raemelton Farm club at Raemelton farm. Paul Appleman will get the call to pitch against the Cabs, with Bill Friend behind the plate.

1,900 Richland Farmers Sign for U. S. Crop Program

55 PER CENT OF FARMS ON CONTROL LIST

Record Number of Richland Agriculturists to Take Part In 1940 Program.

Approximately 1,900 Richland county farmers have agreed to participate in the federal crop program this year, more than in any year since the program was started, Guy L. Taylor, county AAA chairman, said yesterday.

The increased number of participants should bring the county a larger share of federal funds than it received in 1939 when crop payments passed the $100,000 mark, it was said.

The total "sign-up" for the program in the county represents about 55 per cent of the county's farm owners and operators.. Last year 1,788 farmers participated in the plan.

Wheat allotments set up for the 1941 crop for seeding next fall will permit farmers in the county to sow 27,778 acres, six few acres than last fall.

Twenty-seven crop "reporters" who will check farms to see how the federal crop requirements are being complied with received their final instructions at a meeting yesterday at the county AAA headquarters on North Diamond street.

Speakers were Ted Rupert, representing the Ohio Agricultural Conservation office at Columbus, and County Chairman Taylor.

'Reporters' Listed.

The "reporters," appointed by the township AAA committeemen, will start their rounds of county farms on June 1. Appointed to make the check were:

Bloominggrove township, Donald F. Harding and Jay Laser; Butler township, Wilson F. Taylor and Raymond Landis; Cass township, Ben L. Wilson; Franklin township, Charles G. Raiser; Jackson township, George W. Barnes and Ed. J. Lubbe; Jefferson township, C. D. Bollinger.

Madison township, Harry Jones; Mifflin township, George K. Weimer; Monroe township, Royd J. Spohn and Ralph Mengert; Perry township, Chester H. Morgan; Plymouth township, Raymond L. Brooks; Sandusky township, Dale M. Harding; Sharon township, Otto P. Stine and C. C. Till; Springfield township, L. B. Wilson and Robert Walker.

Troy township, L. Fred Griffon, Lee J. Humphrey, and R. C. Dickson; Washington township, Thomas F. McBride; Weller township, Margon Pittenger; Worthington township, Ollie V. Braden and Harley M. Black.

To qualify for federal crop payments, farmers must keep within their acreage allotment and adopt practices that will improve their land.

Sodas Served for Wedding Party by Bridegroom Keaton

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—By now, if they made good time, film comedian Buster Keaton and bride should be at June lake in the high Sierras country on their honeymoon.

Keaton and dancer Eleanor Norris set out for the lake in his station wagon last night after superior Judge Edward Brand married them at the courthouse. Between the ceremony and leave-taking, Keaton treated the wedding party of eight to ice cream sodas at a drugstore.

"Champagne suppers are a lot of nonsense," observed Keaton, former husband of actress Natalie Talmadge.

The word "obey" was omitted from the ceremony but Keaton said later that his wife's word would be law around the house, just the same.

Attending the wedding were Keaton's parents, the Joe Keaton's, his brother, Frank, and sister, Louise, and the bride's mother and sister, Mrs. Dot Norris and Jane Norris.

Mayor William J. Locke has a formula which he says works very well when persons bring their traffic tickets to him to be "fixed." According to the mayor they are all told the same thing —"Yes, I can fix it, but it will cost you $1.50—$1 for the ticket and 50 cents service charge." Locke says so far he hasn't been "called" on it since the person can get off by paying the ticket at the police department and it costs only $1.

In a hurry to get started on a holiday trip, a Memorial day visitor to Mansfield today found out—at the expense of a 50-mile trip back home and another 50 miles of travel back to Mansfield—that haste makes waste. It was a woman this time—she forgot to bring her traveling bag. She left it in the driveway at her home and didn't discover its absence until her arrival here. Fearful that the bag would be stolen, she drove back to her home city and found the bag intact, just where she had left it.

RUSSIA DECIDES

Report Says Reds Ready To Close Peiping Consulate.

PEIPING—(AP)—Soviet Russia was reported reliably today to have decided to close down her consulate general in Peiping, an action which would leave her without consular or diplomatic representation in Japanese-occupied parts of China.

It was said that the consulate general, located in the former embassy building here, would be closed "temporarily" late next month.

Although the action was labelled temporary, it was known that the entire staff and their families were preparing to depart for Moscow.

Previously Russia had closed consular offices in Shanghai Kalgan and Tientsin.

CONANT URGES AID TO ALLIES

Harvard President Says Help Should Be Given Even If It Leads to War.

BOSTON — James B. Conant, president of Harvard, believes the United States should take immediate steps to aid the Allies in the form of arms and supplies even though these steps might result in war for America.

"The actions we propose," he said in a national radio address last night, "might eventuate in war. But fear of war is no basis for a national policy. In a free state public opinion must guide the government. And a wise public opinion on matters of foreign policy can result only if there is a continuous, clear-headed, realistic discussion of all eventualities, including war."

Specifically, Conant declared, aid could be given the Allies by releasing planes and other implements of war to France and England without impairing our own security; by repealing laws preventing U. S. citizens from volunteering for service in foreign armies; by controlling exports so as to avoid leaks to Germany; and by close co-operation of our maritime commission with the Allies to expedite transmission of supplies and munitions.

"To my mind a complete Nazi victory over France and England is by necesity but a prelude to Hitler's attempt to dominate the world," he continued. "At this moment, the entry of the United States into the war certainly does not seem necessary or wise. For the present we are not prepared to render more aid as an active belligerent than we can render as a non-belligerent.

"If our actions short of war are immediate and effective, they may suffice. If, on the other hand, we continue to be confused in our thinking and dilatory in our actions, our aid may come too late.

Then the possibility of war under highly unfavorable circumstances would soon confront us. Our previous fear of war might well result in the certainty of a conflict without the support of powerful nations."

LOSE LICENSES

Mansfield Youths Lose Permits on Charges of Speeding.

Two 17-year-old Mansfield youths had lost their driving rights for 60 days today because they were caught speeding on Park avenue west.

The youths, cited two days ago by police, were Richard Anderson, 135 Vennum avenue, and Jack Shrader 109 Stewart avenue.

Their licenses were suspended by Probate Judge C. J. Anderson following a hearing in juvenile court.

23 MILES OF SEWERS, WATER LINES INSTALLED BY WPA HERE

Construction of 18 miles of new sewers and five miles of new water lines in Richland county, most of which were laid in Mansfield, was completed by the WPA during the past four and a half years, James L. Kelly, Columbus, manager of the central Ohio WPA district, reported today.

Kelly said the construction work also included major extensions in Shelby and East Mansfield utility lines.

Citing figures from the national WPA inventory, Kelly said that the county gained 31 new outdoor recreational units and the improvement of 19 others during the same period. They ranged from parks to tennis courts.

He said construction of a sewage treatment plant in East Mansfield and Bellville had been completed by WPA and that improvements on the Shelby sewage disposal works was included in WPA activities. The construction also included 286 new service connections and 290 manholes or catch basins and 522 sanitary outhouses in the four and a half years.

His report cited construction of the municipal swimming pool at Liberty park and 10 tennis courts, 17 horseshoe courts and a band shell in other parts of the county.

In addition, extensive park improvements were made at Liberty, Prospect and North Lake park and Seltzer park in Shelby.

New athletic fields were acquired at Bellville and Butler and 11 others were improved in the county along with the improvement of Hedges school playground. The government agency also constructed new bleachers at the Senior high school stadium, the Richland county fairground and at Shelby high school.

3,308 FILE

Report Issued on Richland Income Tax Returns.

Richland countians filed 3,308 federal income tax returns in 1939, including 2,695 in Mansfield and 452 in Shelby, Guy T. Helvering, internal revenue commissioner, announced today.

Individual returns, covering the year 1938, filed in other northcentral Ohio counties, included:

Ashland, 837; Crawford, 1,442; Delaware, 428; Holmes, 140; Huron, 1,167, and Wayne, 1,511.

There were 347,535 returns filed in Ohio and 6,250,793 in the nation, Helvering said. The national total dropped off about 148,000 from the preceding year.

UNPAID LEVIES DOWN $39,000 IN PAST YEAR

Auditor Reports $241,357 In Taxes Still Due; $857,904 To Be New Tax Bill.

Richland county's delinquent tax bill was reduced more than $39,000 in the past year to cut the total delinquencies to $241,357, the lowest mark in 11 year's, figures compiled by Deputy Auditor Arthur S. Beck showed yesterday.

Only $24, 440 of the county's first half tax bill for this year has not been paid. The charge for the half year period amounted to well over $500,000.

When Treasurer John E. Kolb begins his second half tax collection within the next few weeks he will present county property owners with a tax bill amounting to $857,904. It will include $616,545 in current real estate and special assessment levies and the $241,357 carryover in delinquent taxes.

Deputy Auditor Beck said the county's foreclosure campaign to collect back taxes and the general gain in business conditions contributed to the marked gain in tax collections.

The present delinquent bill is less than half the $543,562 which had accumulated in delinquencies in 1933, the year of peak delinquencies in the county.

The back tax bill this year is the lowest since 1929 when the delinquencies were down to $182,476.

In Mansfield unpaid taxes for the first half of this year were only $14,063 while city property owners owe a total of $125,002 in delinquent levies over the past several years.

HOLIDAY RISE

Bank Clearings Show 32 Per Cent Increase.

NEW YORK — (AP) — A 32 per cent rise in bank clearings for the week ended May 29 was largely accounted for by the Memorial day holiday in the comparable period of 1939, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Total clearances for 22 leading cities were $5,717,548,000 against $4,314,948,000 for the five-day period last year. They were down $236,926,000 from the total of the preceding week.

Turnover at New York was $3,457,114,000 against $3,603,557,000 for the same 1939 week. Transactions for the 21 cities outside of New York were $2,260,434,000 compared with $1,711,391,000.

The largest percentage gains included Portland, Ore., 53.8, Baltimore 54.5, Dallas 53.2, Cleveland 45.9, Detroit 44.6, Seattle 42.3, Pittsburgh 40.8.

Chicago clearings were $336,500,000 against $262,200,000 last year, an increase of 28.3 per cent.

PARK GROUP TO HOLD FESTIVAL

North Lake Association Plans for Event June 14.

The North Lake Park association will sponsor an ice cream festival June 14 under the park pavilion, it was announced today.

Music will be furnished during the evening by the Senior high school band, directed by J. Merton Holcombe.

Arrangements are in charge of a committee composed of R. H. Damlos, chairman, J. F. Orr, R. C. Barrett, George F. Bergman, F. A. Cleland, Earl McFarland, Charles O. Anglin and Mrs. Charles McBride.

2 MORE CASES

Richland Tuberculosis Cases Up To 23; Clinic Held.

The number of new cases of tuberculosis discovered in Richland county this year was boosted to 23 today, a report of the quarterly recheck chest clinic revealed.

Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner said that of the 27 persons examined at the clinic two showed symptoms of the disease. Three other suspects examined showed a negative reaction.

(This is a compendium of tales that can only be told without names because they're too true to print. If there is any resemblance to any actual persons—living or dead—you probably guessed right.)

The Broadwayites called it peculiar way of "getting even" when Mrs. X. instructed the authorities of another state that she wished her ex-husband placed under bond, because she was afraid of him . . . "Isn't that ridiculous?" the table-sitters whispered, "trying to get revenge by blackening the poor, harmless fellow's reputation.'

Actually, after he has three drinks, Mr. X. himself will confide to you that his former wife insisted on the peace bond only after he had invaded her home and fired his six-shooter at her and at her current boy friend. He was a little tipsy at the time and the bullet holes are still in the wall as evidence of his poor aim.

But you can't print that. When he's sober, he's a swell guy. EVERYBODY loves him.

* * *

Detective Y. is one of the more regular of the Broadway cops, and everyone from the headwaiter at Lindy's to youngest chorine exiting from a 45th street stage door knows him and likes him. For a couple of years now, Detective Y. has been in love with a showgirl, and they planned to be married next autumn. But a few weeks ago, they had a minor quarrel, and didn't see each other for days. Detective Y. was carrying a terrific torch for the girl, and finally he sent a couple of pals to see her and ask her to make it up with him.

One of the friends who agreed to intercede was a state legislator. He went to the hotel where the girl is singing and told her how heartbroken the cop was—and wouldn't she give him another chance?

A fiction writer would be ashamed of the twist the plot took then: the girl and the legislator fell in love at first sight.

But you can't print that. It would embarrass the cop, and the girl, and it would embarrass the state legislator even more—because he's married, and has two lovely children!

Miss Q. never met Alice Faye, and yet she is responsible for Alice's picture stardom. She was a continental film idol years ago. When Rudy Vallee was making one of his early talkies she refused to co-star with him and Alice, who had gone to Hollywood mainly to be near the crooner, was thrust into the spot vacated by the tempermental star.

The tempermental star went back to Germany eventually, and she was regarded as extremely pro-Nazi until just recently the governmental authorities discovered she was a Jewess.

On the day Alice's "Lillian Russell" had its gala premiere, the girl who quite accidentally gave Alice her chance was threatened with death by the Nazis.

But you can't print that. The papers abroad hushed the story completely and it would just make the girl's friends here more unhappy.

* * *

Mr. A. was rising radio comedian and Miss B. was a little girl with a streamlined figure and a lot of ambition. He hocked everything he had to pay her railroad fare to New York, hire the proper tutors for her, and buy her the right kind of wardrobe. He was so mad about her that he neglected his own business.

Today she is one of the highest paid stars in pictures—but en route, she shook him faster than Gilda Gray shakes her hips.

For a long time after she became a star, she had him barred from her studio lot. But she has occasional flashes of big-heartedness, and slips her ex-manager a hundred dollars—and when she does, she tells everyone for miles around about her generosity.

Of course, the years A. concentrated on her cost him most of his valuable connections, and he's really entitled to ten per cent of her weekly salary, which is $2,500.

But you can't print that. People would say, "Why does everyone always pick on movie stars?"

* * *

Many years ago, a beautiful girl (call her Elaine) figured in a spectacular New Orleans murder story. She was engaged to one of the town's wealthiest and most important men—and the man's sweetheart (call her Mary) who was then past middle age, couldn't bear being cast aside for a younger woman. So Mary killed the millionaire.

But his fortune was willed to Elaine, and she eventually married a handsome but penniless young man, and staked him to enough of her inheritance to start a business of his own. He prospered, but nobody quite knew how—the deals were always a little shady. Several years ago the inevitable happened—he was indicted on narcotic charges. But the case is still in the indefinite stages—it just never comes to court.

The charges haven't worried the handsome fellow much. He's seen around Broadway and the Florida night spots buying wine and having the time of his life. The girl who is always on his arm is not his wife, Elaine—but a beautiful little dancer in her very early twenties.

Elaine, who is now nearing forty, finds herself in the position that once drove her rival, Mary, to murder.

But you can't print that. They're still married!

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—One of the locally big movie questions relates to the box-office chances of Sol Lesser's screen version of "Our Town."

Everybody admits it's an "artistic success." Everybody is "crazy about it." Everybody says it's one of those "sure award contenders." Everybody admits it's "different"—and everybody is wondering how the movie masses will take it.

As one who couldn't help raving the first time he saw the movie, and who liked it even better the second time, I can't help wondering what all the wondering is about. That is because, naively or other wise, I persist in believing the movie masses want fine things and will buy fine things provided (1) they have the necessary dinero and (2) learn about the commodity through intelligent presentation.

"Our Town" is an American movie. It is a love story—Boy Meets Girl, if you prefer—with its feet solidly planted in the American soil and tradition, and its bright face lifted to the skies.

* * *

It is simple, informal, chuckly, warmly human, loaded with "heart" and also with that valuable commodity labeled "nostalgia." "Charm" is a poor word to encompass its tender and sympathetic reprojection of an America that disappeared with the machine age, of the people who are our parents, or grandparents. Another important part of the film's freight is its reminder of American tolerance, and its typically American optimism. For "Our Town" reminds that life is worth living, that life is filled with daily wonders too frequently ignored in the stress of living.

In my opinion Thornton Wilder's play, with his own connivance, has been improved in screen translation under Sam Wood's directing hand. The girl (Martha Scott) who died in the play now lives after a dream excursion into Death, where she realizes anew the hold life has upon her. This change, even to any hard-boiled few who haven't fallen completely under the spell of the girl Emily so radiantly created by Miss Scott, should be more than gratifying.

* * *

There are so many good performances—by Fay Bainter, Beulah Bondi, Holden, Guy Kibbee, Stuart Erwin, Philip Wood, Ruth Toby, Arthur Allen—that Miss Scott's work must be given extra laurels. As a newcomer of genuine talent, she will be hailed as an important find, and probably for "stealing the show." Without Frank Craven, the narrator, however, "Our Town" would lose so much of its intimacy—and hence appeal—that he must be rated at least her equal for honors despite the sideline nature of his role.

START HEARING IN NEW ACTION

Jurors Refuse Damages In $7,500 Suit, Take Up Suit For $15,000 Damages.

After refusing to award damages in a $7,500 suit against Lyle Wheaton, Mansfield, the county petit jury began the trial yesterday of a $15,000 damage action involving injuries received by Mrs. Alice Gore of Shelby in a fall downstairs in a Shelby apartment.

The jury deliberated less than 20 minutes late before returning a verdict for Wheaton, who had been named in a suit filed by George Boubary of Mansfield. Boubary sought a judgment for injuries he received when the car in which he was riding collided with Wheaton's machine in Spring mill.

Atty. John L. Catlett defended Wheaton, while Attys. L. H. Beam and Frank S. Culp represented Boubary.

In the action before the jury today, Mrs. Gore contends that George W. Hoffman, owner of the Shelby Hotel apartments, was negligent in failing to keep the stairway lighted in the building. The accident occurred Oct. 25, 1938.

Representing Mrs. Gore are Attys. C. F. Creedman and H. M. Rust. Attys. Long, Anderson and Green of Shelby are counsel for Hoffman.

2 DRAW FINES

Motorists Before Muny Court After Auto Accidents.

Cecil Mosser, 39, of 396 Oak street, was fined $100 and costs and his driver's license suspended for 60 days in municipal court yesterday when he pleaded guilty to a charge of unsafe driving.

Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch suspended $90 of the fine on condition that he pay $20 damages to Howard Oswalt, R. D. 2, whose automobile was damaged in a collision on route 13 north of Mansfield Saturday night.

Convicted on a charge of failing to give his name after an accident, John R. Davis, 326 West Fifth street, was fined $40 and costs. Judge Kalbfleisch suspended $30 on condition that he pay $13 damage to Carl Hipsher, Shelby, whose automobile was damaged in a collision at Park avenue east and Diamond street Sunday.

NURSES HOLD MEETING HERE

District Association Hears Reports On Two Conferences.

Regular meeting of the Ohio State Nurses' association, District No. 5, held Tuesday evening at the Nurses' home, was devoted to a discussion on reports on two recent conferences.

Delegates told of the annual state conference held in Akron, and others reported on the biennial convention held in Philadelphia. Miss Georgia Scott, president, presided

At the close of the session refreshments were served by graduate nurses who reside at the home. Plans were made to hold the next meeting at Brookside park, Ashland, at which time Ashland nurses will be hostesses. Thirty attended the session last night.

DITCHES AUTO TO SAVE CHILD

Chicago Driver Runs Auto Off Road: Girl Unhurt.

Marion Murphy of Chicago, drove his car into a ditch on route 30, in East Mansfield, wrecking it, but preventing possible serious injuries to an eight-year-old girl, highway patrolmen reported today.

The girl was Dorothy Sabo of R. D. 4. According to officers she started across route 30, returned to the curbing when she saw the approaching car, then started across the highway again.

Murphy drove his car off the highway into a ditch in an effort to avoid striking her. Murphy received a bruised knee.

GOES TO COURT

A 28-year-old Mansfield trucking employe, accused of the theft of merchandise from an interstate shipment, was taken to Cleveland yesterday by deputy U. S. marshals for arraignment in federal court.

Arrested here Saturday by police, he is charged with stealing automobile tires from the Akron Motor Cargo terminal at 26 Junction street. Officers said they had recovered 13 tires he allegedly stole while working for the company as a dock employe.

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION++

CHAPTER XXIII

Tony looked at her, his eyes deep and tender, his mouth pulled into a quiet, half smile. "I've got to go back, haven't I? I don't quite know how I feel about Rod, but, funny thing, I can't hurt my mother by making a scene and pulling out. I suppose I can't hurt her because I know I can. I'm one of the few people who can. She's proud of me. I don't know why."

"It's only temporary anyway," Brooke said, calmer now. "You'll be going back soon. That is their life, and your life is your own."

His smile broadened. "You can be so exciting and yet so restful."

"And so hungry. . . ."

He laughed quickly. "Maybe that's what's the matter with me. I'm hungry."

"No rebellion?"

He looked at her. "I'll be waiting."

* * *

She left him at eight o'clock, Mrs. Kingsbury's reading time, and left Mrs. Kingsbury at nine o'clock and went to her room and opened the windows wide and looked down upon a strange city, her thoughts whirling. She had left Tony with the promise to see him again when she returned, and her thoughts followed him back to the palatial house and its oddly assorted occupants, the son, the mother and the young husband. What grim humor Jim would extract from that situation? What could Julian Carlton say to that? She could not guess.

The next afternoon, from the deck of a second ship, she lifted her hand in farewell to no one in particular and went to her cabin to the flowers Tony had sent and to the small white card on which he had written, "I'll be waiting."

Not until the second day at sea did Brooke notice that Mrs. Kingsbury was rapidly failing. She had sent Brooke away that morning, saying wearily and irritably that she had no need of her. In the evening she dropped into a heavy sleep before Brooke had read five pages of a thrilling mystery story which ordinarily would have gripped her interest. Closing the book quietly, looking at the inert figure breathing heavily, Brooke wondered if the old lady's deterioration had been gradual and she, excited by her first ocean voyage and by meeting Tony, had not noticed it. Though Mrs. Kingsbur had never offered friendship, Brooke felt that she would never forgive herself if she had failed in her obligations.

She remained until Ellen came. But Ellen did not linger and they went out into the corridor together.

Brooke asked, "Is she ill, Ellen? She doesn't seem the same."

"I've been seeing the change ever since we left New York," Ellen whispered, shaking her head sadly. "Her mind, too. She forgets things. And she doesn't eat anything. I asked her to send for the doctor and she got mad, wouldn't hear to it. It would be terrible if something happened here. I wouldn't know what to do."

"I don't think she should be left alone."

"But if she wakes up and finds me, she'll be mad. She won't admit she's sick. She says she's just tired. . . ."

"All the same, I think we should look in at her tonight—all night."

* * *

Leaving Ellen, Brooke went to her deck chair, rested her head against it and closed her eyes and listened to the music. It was fortunate, she thought, that she had done nothing more than murmur "Good morning" to friendly passengers and had not, not feeling festive, dressed for dinner. Moreover, the mood to be gay, to dance and to meet people had left her completely.

Past midnight, when she was lost in soothing music and the warmth of a beautiful night, she heard Ellen's hushed voice and saw her pale face loom terrifyingly out of the darkness.

"Oh, Miss Brooke! She's worse. . . . I think. . . . I think it's a stroke!"

The stout, fair young doctor said that it was a stroke and gave only a small hint of hope.

Before morning he walked around the deck with Brooke and said, it's risky business, these old people traveling. It makes it so difficult for their relatives when they die far from home. What will you do?"

"I don't know.

He grinned at her. "You don't seem the drifting type. I am. It gets pretty dull. But you are beautiful. I noticed you when you came on."

"Will she live?"

He said curtly, "No."

Brooke did not change her clothes again until a few hours before the ship dropped anchor in Honolulu, five hours after Mrs. Kingsbury died.

* * *

Dressed in a dark sheer frock and small dark hat, Brooke picked up the remainder of her belongings and put them in her bag. Having summoned Ellen and Francis to her cabin, she expected them at any moment though indeed there was little that could be said and nothing that could be done until they reached Honolulu and Jessica Forbes met them.

Brooke tried to think, fighting fear of her predicament. Anxiety and hope had kept her awake and stimulated her. The kindness of the officers and passengers and particularly the stout, fair young doctor had been very hopeful. But the old lady who had been dying for three days was dead, and Hawaii, the land of sun and beauty and leisure, was before them and she, Brooke, was stranded and alone with insufficient money for a return voyage. It was one of the starkest realities she had ever faced.

The door was open and presently Ellen, her pale face drawn, her eyes red from weeping, and the swarthy Francis, who had always obeyed Mrs. Kingsbury's orders with a grunt, stood outside.

Brooke asked them to come in. Ellen said, "There's nothing we can do until we dock and see Mrs. Forbes. I'll meet her and talk to her. Undoubtedly she'll take charge."

Francis scowled. "How'm I gonna get back to New York?"

"I'm wondering that myself," Brooke said.

Ellen said to the chauffeur, "if you go off and get drunk, we'll never find you."

Francis retorted, "I won't get drunk until I'm paid and if she thinks she's gonna get out of payin' me . . ."

He went out, scowling darkly. Ellen's anger dried up her tears.

* * *

Ellen, no longer a servant, met Brooke's tired dark eyes directly. Taking a deep breath, speaking still in low tones, she said "I was prepared for this. I've saved my money and now—now I'm free. I've been in service since I was 12 when I was sent out as a mother's helper and had to stand on a stool to wash the dishes. That's a long time. . . ."

Her timid smile was by way of an apology for her next words. "I'm well, I got to liking new places and going from being with her. So I think I'll keep on giong until I'm tired of it. Then I can live with my sister in Vermont and help her out. She has a big family."

Ellen's second smile was more apologetic than her first. "You know. I hate these clothes, but servants have to dress like servants. I like bright colors and now I can wear them."

Mrs. Kingsbury's death had given Ellen her freedom and the privilege of wearing bright colors . . .

Brooke said, "You've been very good to me, Ellen, and so capable that I felt useless."

"But I couldn't do the things you did, Miss Brooke. She worried about her papers and letters, and she liked to be read to. I couldn't do that to suit her. She liked you. Oh, she never told me, but I knew. She was afraid to yet you know she liked you. She didn't trust nobody. She always thought everybody was after her money. The trouble with her was that she never had a home."

After a moment, Ellen asked, "What are you going to do?"

"I don't know, Ellen." How could she possibly know?

"You'll have to stand up to Mrs. Forbes." Then, "If there's nothing else, I have some things to put in my trunk."

She left with her customary quietness. One day soon, Brooke thought, Ellen would realize that she could speak as loudly as she chose. She could even shout and knock over things, making a frightful noise.

Brooke was trying to put her thoughts in order when the young doctor stepped in.

* * *

"We'll be in shortly," the young ship's doctor told Brooke. "You need sleep. What a beastly break for you! But you've been splendid."

"You, too," Brooke said. "You saw to it that I ate, at least."

"Anything I can do?"

"Nothing, thank you. I must see Mrs. Kingsbury's niece who will take charge. Every one's been very kind, you especially."

He smiled. "I came down to make a date with you but it's a queer time. . . ."

"I can't plan anything. I don't know where I'll be."

He held out his hand. "Well, good-bye, then. Sorry you came?"

"A year from now I may be able to answer that. Good-bye, doctor. And thank you again."

The cabin was suffocatingly hot and soon she stepped into the corridor, almost colliding with a small young woman wearing a printed silk frock and carrying a Panama hat, an attractive, sunburned young woman with live dark eyes and long straight black hair worn in a plaited braid coiled around her head.

Brooke murmured an apology. The young woman glared at her.

"I'm looking for Mrs. Kingsbury's cabin. I wonder if . . ."

Brooke had not realized uuntil now that the ship's engines were silent. Now she knew that this supercilious though attractive person was Jessica Forbes.

"I'm Brooke Carter," she said. Something must have happened to her face, she thought, to make Jessica's lashes flicked and her dark winged brows draw together. "I'm sorry but I must tell you that Mrs. Kingsbury is dead."

* * *

Several days later, in a small room in a hotel in Honolulu, Brooke went to close the window and stood looking down on a bright city she was reluctant to leave in a few hours. All had gone—Ellen, excited and perspiring to a trip through the islands; Francis, his wallet stuffed, to the nearest bar, and Jessica to the beach house to her husband and children until she could make plans to take Mrs. Kingsbury to Ohio for burial beside her husband.

And Brooke knew that years later the memory of the first day would make her writhe with discomfort — Francis's demand, "I want my money!" Ellen weeping and nervous! Jessica shocked and desperate. But all of Jessica Forbes' faults, Brooke knew now, were the result of her desperate need of money. To Francis, Jessica had turned and cried, "You'll get your money!" and had left the chauffeur with Ellen and her in a hotel, returning hours later with their money for their salaries. With her was her husband, John, a lean, delicate-looking young man with intense dark ayes and thin ning dark hair, who had paced Brooke's room while his wife talked tersely in terms of dollars and cents, giving them enough money for a return tourist class voyage to Los Angeles and the train journey from Los Angeles to New York. She had borrowed the money, she said, and Brooke knew that despair gathered in her mind with the fear that Mrs. Kingsbury, eccentric and distrustful, had not left the estate to her.

When they had gone, Francis scowling, Ellen merely saying that she would return for a proper good-bye and John Forbes without any explanation, Brooke dined with Jessica. She said, as if she were not speaking to Brooke but merely thinging aloud, "John's so impractical. He can't meet emergencies." Then, "Poor Aunt Rachel. I don't suppose she was ever happy in her life. Money should give some measure of happiness but she loved money for money alone. She could have helped us immensely but she was a hard disciplinarian and selfish. I was either to make a brilliant marriage or else be her unpaid companion. When I failed to achieve the first and refused to be the second and married an artist, she never forgave me.

Germans Eye Paris as They Mop up Flanders

British and French Struggling on to Free Troops From Trap In North Under Merciless Enemy Fire.

up and down the coast, ready to pounce upon any transport and prepared to tackle even the sturdiest warships.

The possibility of any large numbers of British escaping consequently was regarded as negligible and the phrase "a futile waste of blood," which the Germans often have used before in speaking of the Poles, the Norwegians and the Belgians, again was being heard in military circles.

The triangle in which the British were hemmed was described as starting on the Belgian coast at a point south of Ostend, running southeast from there to Roubaix and Lille, then back to the coast on a line through Hazebrouck to a point on the French coast between Gravelines and Dunkerque. Its sides were about 50 miles long, and its base on the sea about 30 miles wide.

The ring of steel around the French, said to be a force which sought to escape the Nazi trap by attempting a breakthrough southward near Valenciennes, was considerably smaller. From Lille it was described as running east to the French-Belgian border, only some 10 miles away, then southward to a point east of Orchies, westward to a point north of Douai, then north along the Amiens-Lille road back to Lille.

The military commentator of the authoritative commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland advanced the theory that the beleaguered troops were holding out as long as possible to give the other Allied armies a few additional precious hours in which to prepare the defenses of Paris and the English coast.

Meanwhile, there was speculation as to the direction of the next German thrust, strengthened by troops whose present objective will have been attained with conclusion of the battle of Flanders.

The German press, extremely responsive to the official state of mind, has thundered at England, stridently asserting that alleged British night bombings of undefended towns and non-military objectives soon would be punished. It was claimed these bombings were continued last night over western Germany.

But for the last two days the press has shown a sudden and rapidly-increasing resentment toward France. The alleged abuse and even the reported slaying of German prisoners in France has caused some observers to express the belief there would be prompt retaliation in that direction with a drive on Paris, instead of the long-threatened invasion of England, as the next Nazi aim.

(A broadcast in German on the Berlin wave-length heard today by CBS proclaimed that "now the German people has started to finish up forever this eternal disturber of its peace"—France.

(Saying France repeatedly had "sabotaged the German will for peace," the broadcast said: "Germany's patience is now at an end and the French will now have to feel the war which they have sought to bring upon Germany. . . . France will have to feel the punishment until she has lost all desire for further assaults on Germany.")

Occupation of the Norwegian Arctic ore port of Narvik by the Allies was regarded as an insignificant reverse. Said Adolf Hitler's Volkischer Beobachter:

"It is a useless success. The enemy enters a town reduced to a heap of ruins by a week's bombardment."

(Reports from Stockholm said the German forces withdrawing from Narvik were in danger of being trapped between the Allied troops which captured the town and Norwegian troops posted along the frontier to prevent the Nazis' escape into Sweden.)

With virtually all Belgium now in Nazi hands, the Germans announced settlement of their administration of the Netherlands, with civil authority in the hands of Arthur Seysz-Inquart, minister without portfolio, and military authority entrusted to Aviation General Friedrich Christiansen.

France Accepts Defeat In Battle of Flanders

(By Associated Press)

PARIS—Deciding to abandon northwestern France to the powerful on-rushing German legions, the French army has accepted final defeat in the battle of Flanders, the first great land operation of the European war.

With hope of victory gone and all of France north of the Somme and Aisne rivers—a 10,000-square-mile strip—under virtually complete control of the German army, the Allies centered their attention for the moment on an estimated 300,000 French and British troops being rushed toward the sea to escape the fast-closing jaws of the German trap in Flanders.

French and British warships and both land and naval airplanes co-operated in this great retreat, being made through hard-pressed Dunkerque. That channel port was under constant artillery and aerial fire by Nazis hoping to wipe out the remnants of the defeated forces, whose plight became hopeless after the surrender Tuesday of the Belgian army under King Leopold III.

Official communiques gave only a meager picture of the actual scope and ferocity of the fighting attending this operation. Such communique phrases as "struggle of exceptional intensity" and "at the cost of the hardest fighting" were used to describe actions which it is taken for granted are costing many lives.

With Dunkerque the last avenue of escape for the trapped Allied troops, the Allied command fortified the port for a last stand to cover the retreat and flooded the land behind it to keep out the onrushing Germans.

Waters rose steadily in the vast system of streams around Dunkerque after the Allies opened the locks southwest and northeast of the port on the great canal that flows by the city and along the coast for many miles.

The Allies were abandoning to the Germans a strip of territory approximately 200 miles long and of an average width of 50 miles, its southern boundary lying along the Somme and Aisne rivers from the channel to a point near the Luxembourg frontier. It includes a rich industrial section and important channel ports.

British Struggle to Keep Up Morale at Home

(By Associated Press)

LONDON — Great Britain's press tried today to prevent a slump in the nation's morale as a result of the Allied defeat in the battle of Flanders.

While Tommies of the British expeditionary force fell back to the English Channel, fighting their way out of the Nazi death trap as best they could, the press warned the public to beware of a German propaganda drive to split the Allies by capitalizing on the Flander disaster.

The Daily Express, published by Lord Beaverbrook, now minister for aircraft production, declared that civilians could help their fighting forces by resisting "Hitler's attempts to rouse recrimination between France and Britain" over incidents leading to the final rout in Flanders.

The German thrust deep into France and thence westward to the Channel, cutting off the B. E. F. and Belgian and French forces in Flanders, was mentioned.

Asserting that "incredible mistakes" were committed by both countries, the Express commented that "the people of Britain lingered long in slothfulness while France was fully mobilized for war."

The military commentator of the News Chronicle urged the people to view the Flanders battle in its "correct perspective" and face it "as the great disasters of the last war were faced." He continued that General Maxime Weygand, commander of the Allied forces, "to win the war must lose this battle" and cut losses while the Allies massed planes and tanks for a tremendous counterstroke.

Bomb Salvos from the British air force and blasts from British naval guns were reported taking a heavy toll among the Germans as the air and naval arms co-operated in the Allied withdrawal through the Channel port of Dunkerque.

Royal Air Force and French bombers hammered at German communication lines to relieve the pressure on the trapped Allied forces. The air ministry said the R. A. F. shot down at least 22 German aircraft without one British loss in the Dunkerque sector yesterday.

Germans Use Old Methods, Too

Blitzkriegs not only utilize such ultra-modern tools of war as the flame-throwing tank, dive bombers and parachutes, but also include the use of methods of war prevalent in ancient times—such as pontoon bridges and scaling ladders. Pictured above is a detachment of German troops crossing a Belgian river and scaling the abutment of a destroyed bridge by means of scaling ladders in the manner of medieval soldiers storming a castle wall.

Italy Feverishly Girds For War to Win Her 'Claims'

(By Associated Press)

ROME—Fascist Italy worked feverishly today preparing for the moment to which Premier Mussolini has been looking forward for nearly two decades—when the nation should go to war for her "aspirations."

While foreign and Italian observers expected a decisive step by Italy within a few days, the United States liner Manhattan began to take passengers and freight aboard at Genoa.

U. S. lines officials hoped the ship could leave for home tomorrow, a day ahead of schedule, but this was considered unlikely as cots were placed in the salons to accommodate extra passengers fleeing from the European war.

Part of the Fascist preparations centered on perfecting what spokesmen refer to as the "third line of defense," consisting of an estimated 10,000,000 women and minors who would have non-combatant roles in wartime.

Volunteers in Rome continued to offer their services for a parachute corps, following the lead of Padua and Trieste workers.

Observers believed that the first Italian war blow on the side of Germany might be struck southward in the Mediterranean sea rather than directly at France.

(Under the Allied-Turkish alliance, Turkey—guardian of the Dardanelles—is pledged to enter the war as an ally of Britain and France in the "event of an act of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area.")

PARIS—(AP)—United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt, accompanied by Premier Reynaud and officials of American war veterans organizations, laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier today in a brief Memorial day ceremony.

Religious services later were held at the American cathedral church, where six crosses, symbolic of the six American World war cemeteries in France and Belgium, were grouped around the altar.

the ages—but one bomb could demolish any of them. Designs were chosen only after international competition. They compare favorably with the greatest memorial architecture anywhere.

France Observes Memorial Day.

The years of peace since 1918 have been kind to these quiet places. The French peasantry has adopted the American custom of Memorial day. The nearest Sunday to May 30 is regularly celebrated by the villagers who remember the American khakiclads of 1918.

The American Battle Monuments commissions is in charge of maintaining the cemeteries. There has been no fear expressed officially that the cemeteries are in danger. Indeed, there has been every effort to minimize the threat.

But war recks little of sentiment and less of beauty. The German invasion of France and Belgium and its attendant threat to the perpetual quiet of the American graveyards has brought the war home, as nothing else, to the thousands of American families whose sons and brothers lie there.

Flanders In Battle Zone.

Here are the American cemeteries in Europe:

Flanders Field — lies between Brussels and Ypres in the heart of Belgium at Waereghem in territory held by Germans, 368 American dead lie here.

St. Mihiel—4,152 American soldiers rest here—lies 26 miles from the city of Nancy, recently bombed.

Suresnes—on the outskirts of Paris, five miles from the city center; 1,541 Americans who died of wounds in base hospitals are buried here.

Meuse-Argonne, 18 miles from Verdun, is still beyond the battle line. The largest U. S. foreign cemetery, it is the last haven of 14,240 American soldiers.

Oise-Aisne, containing 6,012 American graves, lies 14 miles from Chateau Thierry, outside the present battle zone.

Aisne-Marne—2,288 Americans, mostly those who fell at Belleau wood, are buried here. This cemetery, too, is outside the present battle zone.

Somme—Endangered also by this war; 1,833 Americans who were in units attached to British forces lie here.

Brookwood—25 miles from London—might be threatened if total war reaches England. 468 Americans, many of them victims of the Tuscania torpedoing, rest here.

LOST BASKET

An Automobile Picked It Up and Took It Far Away.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. — (AP) — Peter Malm, of Malden, who lost his lunch bag when the handle got caught in the door handle of a passing automobile, has it back now.

He caught the license number of the car which spirited away his empty lunch basket and a police check-up found it hanging on the doorknob of William E. Parker's machine in New Bedford, 50 miles away.

Dollfuss Widow Leaves England As Blitzkrieg Approaches.

LONDON—(AP)—Frau Englebert Dollfuss, widow of the Austrian chancellor who was assassinated in an attempted Nazi putsch in 1934, has arranged to sail for Canada with her two children.

The westward drive of Adolf Hitler's forces influenced her decision to leave the quiet little rural cottage in which she has lived for two years.

JAPANESE RAIDS

Chungking District Bombed For Fifth Consecutive Day.

CHUNGKING—(AP)—The Chungking district was bombed this morning in the fifth consecutive day of Japanese air raids, although the city itself, the provisional capital of the central Chinese government, was not a target.

Taking part in the program will be veterans of the two wars, school boys, patriotic organizations and community groups.

While the program will follow largely along the traditional lines of past years, there will be a new seriousness in it because of the world conditions today. Capt. William Vance, Columbus, an officer of the World war and a speaker of ability, will be the speaker of the day.

The Jonathan Glee club, made up of Lawrence Chamberlain, Albert Arnold, Don Kirkpatrick and Dwight Hodgson, will sing the camp song of the Civil war "Tenting On the Old Camp Ground," and the patriotic song that has swept America today, "God Bless America."

T. M. Bell, veteran of the war in Cuba in '98, will read the roll call of soldier dead of the past year, while Mrs. Helen Edmondstone, of the American Legion auxiliary, will read the roll call of all auxiliary members who have died since last Decoration day. Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, chaplain of the Legion, will officiate as chaplain this afternoon.

LETS CONTRACT

City Buys $957 Addressing Machine on Low Bid.

Contract for purchase of an address plate making machine for the municipal water, sewer and garbage department was awarded to the Addressograph Sales agency, Toledo, yesterday by the city board of control on the company's bid of $957.

The proposal, lone bid submitted on the machine, was opened by the board yesterday noon. Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton said the contract was awarded immediately.

He said the machine was already in the department office on approval. Purchase was authorized by council several weeks ago when it approved an appropriation of $1,200 to cover cost of the equipment and purchase of plates necessary for changing address plates.

The changes are being made in connection with the correction of some 5,000 house numbers in the city. The new electric key-board type machine will replace a hand operated model which has been in use in the office for the past 10 years.

FIRM BUYS JAIL

LIVINGSTON, Tex. — (INS) — Would you like to buy a jail? A national oil refining and distributing firm wanted to, and did. The old Polk county jail, out of use since construction of a new building a year ago, was sold at public auction to the company for $10,250. The company will tear it down and put up a service station.

DEFENSE PLAN HITS SNAG ON TAX ARGUMENT

August Session of Congress Suggested to Work Out General Program.

15 to Aug. 1 and come back to enact a general program so that business will know just where it stands."

Republican ways and means committeemen refused to say whether they would accept the schedule of new tax levies made public by Doughton yesterday.

Doughton, saying that "no better plan has been presented yet," disclosed that the administration contemplated 10 per cent increases in individual and corporate income taxes payable next March, and boosts in taxes on gasoline, liquor, beer, luxuries and amusement admissions.

"We are not wedded to this schedule necessarily," he said. "But it was the best we could figure out in such a short time. Maybe we will make a lot of changes in it, or, possibly, we might recommend something else altogether."

In another defense department, the army made ready to place a $150,000 "educational" order for 10,000 new-type gas masks, designed especially for civilian use.

The economic front had its share of developments:

J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, reported that the country's railways were adequately equipped to cope with any demands arising from the defense program.

The National Association of Manufacturers, through its directors at Chicago, pledged the "experience and utmost energy" of its 7,000 members in cooperating with the army, the navy, and the defense commission.

Legislation facilitating RFC loans to defense industries for expansion and production got the approval of the house banking committee.

Donald M. Nelson, Sears, Roebuck executive, was named by President Roosevelt to be procurement director of the treasury, a key post equivalent to that of purchasing agent for the government.

Expressions in both AFL and CIO quarters that the appointment of Sidney Hillman to the defense commission in charge of the labor effort might go far toward closing the breach between the two unions. Hillman, a CIO vice president, has favored settlement of the controversy.

GALION—Helen Garverick of Route 2, Galion, underwent a major operation at the Good Samaritan hospital, Monday evening. Carolyn Ann Hoffman had a tonsil operation at the hospital Tuesday morning.

JAC ANNOUNCES 9-PLY PROGRAM OF ACTIVITIES

Continuation of Projects Now Under Way, New Ones Are Listed by President.

Year's program to be carried out by the Junior Association of Commerce was announced yesterday by Harry Hollingsworth, president.

The program, made up of nine points, includes continuation of the amateur boxing show; continuing clean-up activities as an annual project; to work with organizations having a strong American program; to co-operate with the local camp of the Civilian Conservation Corps; encourage the use of the franchise through "Get Out the Vote" campaign; work with all existing agencies on problems of juvenile welfare and delinquency.

To carry on charitable activities throughout the year; continue its work in the interests of aviation and co-operate with the Cleveland junior chamber in the annual Ohio air tour, and to work with city officials and organizations on traffic problems.
